Group Calls Green for Testimony

President of A. F. L. Is Summoned Before Senate Committee on West Strike

Aviation, Motor Strike Threats Persist in the Nation

(By The Associated Press)
President William Green of the A. F. L. was called today for testimony before a Senate committee investigating the west coast shipyard strike.

Meanwhile, labor difficulties persisted at the Packard Motor Car Company at Detroit, and at the North American Aviation, Inc., plant at Inglewood, Calif., accompanied in each case by threats to strike.

The committee before which Green was called is headed by Senator Truman (D-Mo.) and is entrusted with a general investigation of the progress of defense preparations. Recently the group has evidenced deep concern with the operators in a coastwise agreement signed with the A. F. L. In a back-to-work movement, some A. F. L. shipyard workers—three machinists are on strike at 11 yards holding $500,000,000 worth of defense orders.

The machinists ask $1.15 an hour with double pay for overtime, compared with $1.12 and time-and-one-half offered by the operators in a coastwise agreement signed with the A. F. L. In a back-to-work movement, some A. F. L. shipyard workers—three machinists are on strike at 11 yards holding $500,000,000 worth of defense orders.

Ready to Strike
C.I.O. United Automobile Workers at the North American Aviation plant were reported ready to strike at 3 p. m. tomorrow to enforce their demand for a blanket 10-cent hourly raise for all the concern's 11,000 employees, together with a boost in the minimum rate from 50 to 75 cents an hour.

The company has $109,000,000 in national defense orders. Another strike threat was at the Packard plant in Detroit, where some of the 9,500 employees are working on airplane engines for the British and the United States army. C.I.O.-U.A.W. members there also asked a 10-cent hourly wage hike. The present scale was not disclosed.

Operations continued yesterday at the Niagara Falls, N. Y., plant of the Carborundum Company, despite a strike by some of its 3,200 employees for a collective bargaining agreement. The firm makes abrasives, important in many defense establishments.

The national mediation board at Washington continued its attempt to obtain an agreement between southern soft coal operators and the C.I.O. United Mine Workers, at odds for months over wages. The southern owners were reporting putting their case in writing, which was taken as indicating that the deadlock might be prolonged.

Insists on Payment
The union insists that the same wages be paid in northern and southern mines. An April shutdown of the mines was ended by a temporary understanding, when northern owners agreed to raise

Bankers Are Asked to Set Pace for Nation in Sale of Defense Bonds

Buffalo, N. Y., May 27 (P)—The state superintendent of banks called upon New York's bankers today to "set the pace for the nation" in the sale of defense bonds.

William R. White told the State Bankers Association's 48th annual meeting: "Let us seize this opportunity to demonstrate the vitality and resourcefulness of a democratic people by performing voluntarily and with enthusiasm a service which in many nations today would be exacted from the people under penalty of the concentration camp or the firing squad."

White declared all bankers are agreed "this method of financing the unusual requirements of the government is sound and consistent with our American system."

Bismarck Is Reported Sunk by British

This picture of the 35,000-ton German battleship Bismarck, which sank the British battle cruiser Hood in the waters between Iceland and Greenland, was released in Berlin. The British admiralty reported that British naval planes scored a torpedo hit on the Bismarck somewhere in the Atlantic and that the ship was sunk. (Picture by radio from Berlin to New York).

200 Are Confirmed By Archbishop at St. Mary's Church

Many of Catholic Clergy in Parishes of Region Seated in Chancel for Ceremony

In his first visit to St. Mary's Church since his elevation to the highest ecclesiastical office in the archdiocese of New York, Archbishop Francis J. Spellman administered confirmation to a class of 200 in the local church today.

A large crowd turned out for the colorful ritual which began at 11:30 o'clock and lasted until after the noon hour and seated in the chancel were members of the Catholic clergy from neighboring parishes of the area.

Archbishop Spellman delivered an inspiring sermon to the members of the confirmation class, which occupied the center of the church edifice. The other sections of the church were filled with sponsors and relatives and friends of those receiving the rite of confirmation.

Preceding the services at the church the archbishop blessed a large gathering assembled outside the church.

The procession from the church rectory to the church was led by the acolytes followed by the clergy of this area and the archbishop.

Early Says After F.D.R.'s Speech This Evening There Will Be No Further Doubt About National Policy

Washington, May 27 (P)—In the midst of preparing a momentous pronouncement on governmental policy, President Roosevelt asked congress today for $3,319,000,000 in appropriations for more airplanes.

Stephen Early, presidential secretary, told reporters that the Chief Executive would extend his fireside chat tonight an extra 15 minutes and asserted:

"I think you can say that by Wednesday morning there can no longer be any doubt as to what the national policy of this government is. I think I'll just stand on that."

Early announced that the request for huge new funds for planes was being sent to capitol hill in a letter to Speaker Rayburn.

Of the total, $2,790,000,000 would be for the army and $529,000,000 for the navy.

No Estimate Given
Early declined to estimate the number of planes to be ordered with the money or to say whether bombers would be emphasized.

Nor would he go into any detail on the possible contents of the presidential address tonight. He said, however, that it had been out and worked over and eliminated and additions made until it had reached the point where it could not very well be fitted into the original 30 minutes for which it was scheduled.

Accordingly, Early is asking broadcasting companies, which will transmit Mr. Roosevelt's words to the entire world, for a 15-minute extension of time.

Again today, Early offered no discouragement to reports that the address would probably be one of the most significant ever delivered by the Chief Executive.

One of the reasons the President has spent so much time on preparation of the address—he has devoted more attention to it than any Early could remember—was said to be that he was endeavoring to read much of the tremendous volume of mail and telegrams that is deluging the White House.

Early said that 12,000 to 14,000 letters and telegrams were arriving each day but that it was impossible to tabulate them so as must register.

McNair Says U. S. Has Made Great Training Progress

Headquarters Chief Says Army Is Thankful It Didn't Have to Fight Before

New Orleans, May 27 (P)—The army is thankful "we haven't had to fight before now," Major General Leslie J. McNair, chief of general headquarters, said today, and added that "very remarkable progress" has been made in the huge training program begun last fall.

Here to address the annual convention of the Reserve Officers Association, General McNair said in an interview that the "greatest problem" facing the expanding army is obtaining equipment. Despite this, he asserted, the training program is advancing satisfactorily as there are no shortages "that can't be fixed."

"The army," he said, "has much to be thankful for—especially that we haven't had to fight before now. Hitler had seven years in which to prepare his machine. It will be fortunate if we have to use ours without adequate preparation."

"The army is only hoping and praying that it can get a chance to train reasonably and adequately if there is fighting."

Paying tribute to the troops now in training, the general said, "they've worked harder than any troops in the World War or since then, and they're worked to a fine advantage. The work has been strenuous, but of a reasonable sort. The soldiers have had to give every effort."

"The young people we are getting through the Selective Service system are superb material and if we can't make a great army out of these men, it's the army's fault—not theirs."

The shortage of equipment, he asserted, was more apparent in the air corps than elsewhere, but the training program is not suffering.

The general added that there was no thought at present of extending military service of selectees in grave straits.

No wonder then, that as Hitler presses in for the kill his great thought is to halt the American supplies which are keeping him from victory.

Calls Patrols Warlike
Thus it is that Germany not only claims conveying would be an act of war, but even asserts that our patrol system is a belligerent action. Washington takes the position that such a patrol for the protection of the western hemisphere is within the law.

A number ago President Roosevelt made our position very clear on this point of patrols. In one of his press conferences he said in substance that for a year and a half vessels of the neutrality patrol had been operating as far as 1,000 miles into the Atlantic from the eastern shore of Maryland.

During that time the patrol had been extended here, and had been pulled in there. He said it was being extended and would be extended from time to time.

The extension would go as far into the seven seas as was necessary for hemispheric defense. A patrol wouldn't necessarily be confined to the Atlantic.

This is the position as we await President Roosevelt's fireside chat, which is of such great importance as to have occupied much of his time for some days.

U.S.-Built Plane Spots Conqueror of H.M.S. Hood; 18,000 Nazis Die in Greece

Hitler's Aim Is To Scare America From Entering War

Fuehrer Would Be Happy to See U. S. Tangle With Japan, Keep Aid From Foes

By DEWITT MACKENZIE (Freeman Special News Service)

Nazi Grand Admiral Raeder's warning to the United States against aid for Britain perhaps would have lacked some of its emphasis had it been delivered today with Germany's proud battleship Bismarck lying at the bottom of the sea, but the issues of the moment still remain those involved in his statement.

Among other things, the admiral declared that American convoys for contraband to England would be met by the guns of the German navy if necessary. Such convoys, he said, wouldn't scare the Nazi navy—a remark bolstered by the sensation sinking of the British battle cruiser Hood which went down under gunfire from the Bismarck.

Secretary of State Hull in commenting on the admiral's statement accused Germany of trying by threats to induce the United States to refrain from any real efforts at self defense. Presidential Secretary Early thought Berlin was trying to beloud Mr. Roosevelt's fireside chat tonight.

Admiral Raeder's threat was, of course, made under orders from the fuhrer, since he alone can authorize such statements. Obviously, too, it was intended partly to intimidate us and partly to try to create confusion in the minds of the American public.

Beyond this, just what did Nazidom have in mind in making such a statement? Here is one case where thought reading isn't very difficult.

Effort to Check Aid
First off, it was an effort to stymie our aid to Britain without forcing us into the conflict. Germany doesn't want war with Uncle Sam at this critical juncture.

Her Hitler naturally would be delighted to see us at war with Japan in the Far East, so to dissipate our forces and hamper our aid to the Allies, but he has all he wants on his hands already in the European theatre.

The Nazi chief recognizes that in all probability he is going to win or lose the war this summer. That doesn't necessarily mean that peace will be signed so soon, but that the outcome will be determined.

He recognizes, too, that the outcome depends on American aid to the Allies. Without our help Britain and her supporters cannot win.

As a matter of fact, Britain's position is exceedingly serious as she waits for our production to get going full blast to supply her with sinews of war without which she must go under. We can make it even stronger, and say that if vital supplies do not reach her in the immediate future she will be in grave straits.

No wonder then, that as Hitler presses in for the kill his great thought is to halt the American supplies which are keeping him from victory.

Royal Navy Repays Nazis For Sinking of Biggest Battleship Off Greenland

Pitched Battle Occurs 400 Miles West of Brest; Aerial Torpedoes Damage Raider and Men-o-War Guns Send Ship Down in Atlantic

(By The Associated Press)

Germany's new 35,000-ton battleship Bismarck, trapped by overwhelming guns of the British fleet and the torpedoes of darting planes, was sent to the bottom of the North Atlantic after a three-day hunt at 11 a. m. (4 a. m., E.S.T.) today even as her guns still blazed and her radio sent a last message home, "Long Live the Fuehrer!"

With her swastika flag flying to the end, the big German sea raider fell victim to what the British described as "the whole apparatus of our ocean control" in a pitched battle some 400 miles west of Brest, France.

Thus did Britain's Royal Navy repay the greatest blow to its pride since the war began—the sinking on Saturday of the 42-100-ton battleship Hood, the world's largest fighting craft, with the loss of approximately 1,300 officers and men, in a fight with the Bismarck off Greenland.

Overtaking the German man o'war as she reeled in uncontrollable circles, her rudder and propellers smashed by aerial torpedoes, the British fleet delivered the coup de grace and closed one of the greatest naval chapters in history.

Ironically, the planes which struck the mortal blow were from the aircraft carrier Ark Royal, often reported by the Germans to have been sunk.

Accounts varied whether the giant battleship was actually sunk by gunfire or air-launched torpedoes. Possibly both struck simultaneously, with planes diving again and again to hurl their torpedoes into the Bismarck's vitals while the Prince of Wales and other British warships poured a tempest of fire into the German raider, flourishing helplessly in the sunlit waters.

Britons found another big headline in reports from Greek sources in Cairo that 18,000 Germans have lost their lives so far in the aerial invasion of Crete, including 5,000 drowned at sea.

Hitler's high command said the Bismarck was crippled at 9 o'clock last night, 400 miles west of Brest, when she was hit by two plane-launched torpedoes, smashing her rudder and propellers.

"In the battle against gradually increasing strength of enemy naval forces, the battleship Bismarck fought on," the Nazi high command said.

12,295 Go to Work
State Turns Out 2,500 Men Monthly for Defense Jobs, Is Report

Albany, N. Y., May 27 (P)—New York's vocational training classes are turning out 2,500 workmen monthly for defense jobs, the state education department reported today.

More than 12,295 graduates of the 93 schools conducting adult vocational education classes for national defense industries have been put to work in defense plants since last September, the agency said.

"These defense courses, sponsored by the federal government, run from 100 to 400 hours and are free to all citizens," explained Oakley Furney, bureau chief of industrial and technical education.

The greatest numbers of placements have been in machine shop work, 3,987, and aviation manufacturing, 3,747.

Other courses include welding, lens grinding, tool design, industrial chemistry, automobile mechanics, drafting, electrical trades, radio and photography.

Bond Gives Estimate of 1941 State Crops

Syracuse, N. Y., May 27 (P.)—New York's 1941 fruit and vegetable crop will be worth more than $50,000,000, Professor Morris C. Bond, extension specialist in marketing at Cornell University, believes.

Bond addressed yesterday's meeting of more than 100 state farmers and marketing leaders planning ways to increase consumption of New York farm products during peak summer growing months.

The "real problem," the Ithaca explained, is to move fruits and vegetables out of production areas. He said merchants must cooperate to step up consumption.

European Corn Borer On Increase in State

Geneva, N. Y., May 27—Sweet corn growers in New York state may expect more trouble than ever from the European corn borer this season in the opinion of Dr. L. A. Carruth, entomologist at the Experiment Station here. This gloomy outlook is based on the widespread injury from this pest suffered throughout the state last year, the continued presence of a two-generation strain on Long Island and in the Hudson Valley, and the greatly increased activity of the single-brooded strain found in western New York. In eastern New York sweet corn harvested in July and September is most seriously attacked, while in central and western New York the most serious borer injury occurs to corn harvested in August, particularly during the first two or three weeks.

Of the various measures which have been tried for the control of the European corn borer in sweet corn insecticides probably offer the most promise of effective results at this time, explains Dr. Carruth. Numerous experiments have shown that this insect can be controlled by insecticides, although further improvements in materials, equipment, and techniques of application need to be developed. The profitable use of insecticides is now largely dependent on the market price of sweet corn. If a high price can be expected or if a premium is paid for borer-free corn, the use of insecticides may be considered.

"The European corn borer spends the greater part of its destructive feeding period within the corn plant beyond the reach of insecticides," continues Dr. Carruth, "and is 'vulnerable' for only a relatively short period after hatching, when young borers may be found feeding on leaves and other exposed plant surfaces. To be effective, insecticides must be applied at the times these young borers are present. It is estimated that these treatments will cost not far from $20 an acre, or 2 to 3 cents per dozen ears. This cost is not regarded as prohibitive where early sweet corn is in good demands, but it is much too costly where sweet corn is grown for canning. Treatments must extend over a period of nearly a month at a time when eggs are being laid continuously and when plant growth is most rapid.

"At least four insecticide treatments are usually needed to protect the newly exposed plant surfaces adequately. This unavoidable situation is an important factor in the cost of the treatments. Insecticide treatments can not prove successful unless growers are willing to apply the best available materials, starting at the proper time, and continuing for the recommended number of applications." Further details on the use of insecticides to combat the European corn borer may be obtained by writing to the Station.

Three Weather Marks Shattered in April

Ithaca, N. Y., May 27 — April was unusually warm and dry, with abundant sunshine, and the lowest snowfall on record, according to the monthly summary of the weather bureau of the U. S. Department of Commerce at Cornell.

Daily temperatures averaged six degrees above normal; it was the warmest April since 1921, the report says. Sunshine averaged 75 per cent, which is 33 per cent above normal. The report continues:

"It was the driest April since 1900. Average precipitation for the state was only 1.53 inches, which is 1.43 inches below normal. The deficiency since January 1 now amounts to 3.81 inches.

"Snowfall averaged only 0.2 of an inch for the state, the lowest snowfall since the records began in 1890. No severe storms were reported during the month.

"After the first week, the weather was favorable for all outdoor work. Farmers were busy plowing, seeding oats, peas, and barley. New seedlings, alfalfa, wheat, and pastures advanced rapidly because of the warm weather. Fruits advanced almost too rapidly for the season. The making of apple sirup was about completed by the middle of the month."

Wallkill Resident Benefits

New York, May 26 (Special)—A one-twelfth interest in the property left by the late Abraham Mintzes of New York, goes to his niece, Sarah Retzker of Wallkill, according to a State Transfer Tax Department report filed today. She received approximately $2,900. The testator died on October 5, 1940, leaving property which today's appraisal sets at $35,877 net value. The estate is divided among relatives.

Annapolis, Md. (P)—Little more than half the 500 naval reservists graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy this year were able to obtain swords, for foreign supplies have been cut off. To save embarrassment, the navy waived a rule requiring all officers to wear swords when reporting for duty.

KRUMVILLE

Krumville, May 27—Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Smith, who have been ill for the past week, are able to be about again.

Word has been received that O. A. Hansen recently underwent an operation at the Vassar Hospital at Poughkeepsie, and that his condition is reported as being good at this time.

Mrs. Paul Geisler and her daughter, Judith, of Rutherford, N. J., have been spending the past week at the home of Mrs. Geisler's father, Ephraim Krum.

Mr. and Mrs. Jens Jackson recently entertained 25 of their friends at their home in honor of their 53rd wedding anniversary.

Miss Vera Wager is spending some time visiting her aunt at Stanford, Conn.

Choir rehearsal will be held next Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Lortz.

The Lyonsville Church is making plans for its Fourth of July party.

Miss Norma Dee Conklin, teacher of District No. 1 of the town of Olive, last Friday gave her pupils a May Day party at Beaver Lake, Krumville.

Those from here who attended the Rondout Valley Sunday School Association held at the Methodist Church at Stone Ridge were:

Mrs. Lorin Haver, Alberta Wager and the Rev. and Mrs. William H. Barringer. The Rev. Mr. Barringer gave the junior sermon at this gathering.

Lois Gray of Olive Bridge spent the week-end with her grandmother, Mrs. Katie Davis.

Mrs. Arthur Brink, a sister of William Lortz, and Mrs. S. E. Brundage, Mrs. Lortz's mother, both of Lake Katrine, spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Lortz, and Sunday they, with Mr. and Mrs. Lortz and their daughter, Lorain, were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Eckert.

Church school will meet next Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. Morning divine worship service will meet at 11 o'clock. Subject of the sermon will be "The Man Who Was Ready." Subject of sermon for the children will be "It Can't Be Done."

Warns U. S.

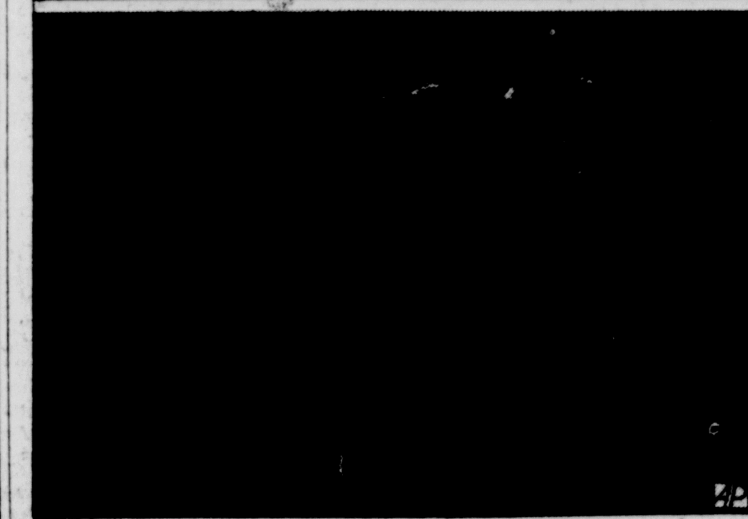

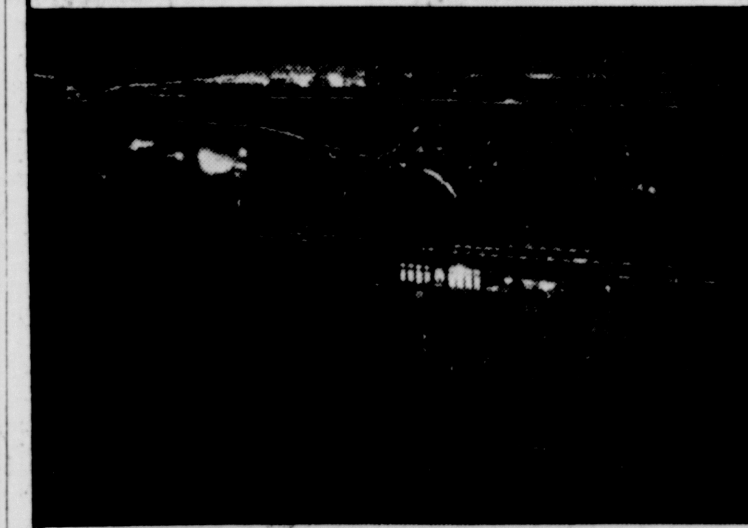

Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, commander of the German navy, warned the United States that American convoys for materials going to England would constitute an "open war act" which would be prevented by guns of the German navy if necessary.

Isolationists Happy

A living argument for isolationists are the Havasupai Indians of northern Arizona, who call themselves by the romantic name, "the blue-green water people," according to an article in the current issue of Natural History, the magazine of the American Museum. The home of this tribe, which probably have never numbered more than a few hundred, consists of only 100 acres of tillable land, surrounded by towering cliffs that can be scaled in but a few places. Three waterfalls higher than Niagara add to the natural beauty of this rock-girt paradise. Living in peace among themselves and untouched by external troubles, the Havasupai Indians might well be the envy of a turbulent world.

Mihailoff Is Executed

Rome, May 27 (P)—Vasail Laci Mihailoff, accused of firing several shots at an automobile in which King Vittorio Emanuele was riding with the Albanian premier on a visit to that country May 17, was executed at dawn today in Tirana prison. The Italians said Mihailoff, who was described as a Greek afflicted with "a poetic madness," fired the shots in an attempt on the life of the Albanian premier, Shefket Verlaci. All the shots went wild. Mihailoff was convicted by a military tribunal and sentenced to death before a firing squad.

FOLLY AND NECESSITY

"The World War," says an indignant American, "cost, apart from the lives, 400 billion dollars. With that money the combatants could have built a $2,500 house, furnished it with $1,000 worth of furniture, placed it on five acres of ground worth $100 an acre, and given this home to every family in the United States, Canada, Australia, England, Wales, Ireland, Scotland, France, Belgium, Germany and Russia.

"We could have given to each city of 20,000 inhabitants and over, in every country named, a $5,000,000 library and a $10,000,000 university. Out of what was left we could have set aside a sum of five per cent that would provide a $1,000 yearly salary for an army of 125,000 teachers, and a like salary for another army of 125,000 nurses.

"Why, in the name of good common sense, should we plunge ourselves into another foolish conflagration?"

Perhaps we shouldn't. Possibly we won't. But we might reply somewhat as follows:

Yes, conceivably we could have saved all that wealth—if it were merely a mathematical problem. And conceivably we and other nations involved could behave so sensibly now—if it were merely a mathematical problem.

But unfortunately it isn't so simple and clear and manageable as a set of figures on a blackboard. What we have to deal with are human beings, singly and in groups and in nations. And the individual human being is a very complex organism, who will not operate according to mathematical formulas. He has all kinds of queer emotions and prejudices and aspirations mixed up with his arithmetic and logic. Especially the instinct to protect his home and country and his own way of life.

AN "INSIDE JOB"

It is stated by Water Leckrone, a Scripps-Howard writer, after a study of the Nazi-American situation, that Hitler and his militarists are now actually at war against the United States. It is, of course, not a declared war nor a "shooting" war, but a war of propaganda, division and sabotage.

His aims, says the writer, are broadly these: "To split the people of the United States into hostile groups that will fight each other, in hostile civil war if possible; and to surround the United States with hostile, Nazi-dominated nations.

So far as is known, Hitler has no plans for armed invasion. His idea is to destroy this country from within, to make America destroy itself, as he has done in other countries.

It is also charged by Edmond Taylor, in a recent issue of Fortune magazine, that agents of the Axis, with special reference to Nazi agents, are using blackmail as one of their main weapons to make our country destroy itself.

Such ruthless meddlers are said not only to be blackmailing prominent Americans, both men and women, but trying to drive wedges of hostility and suspicion between important groups of Americans, "enlarging all the fissures of American unity and aggravating all the conflicts, political, social, economic and racial, that tend to divide us."

It is well to be warned about these things. The process has already gone too far for our own comfort, and the effort will doubtless intensify from now on.

UNPLEASANT SALESMANSHIP

A lot of people are getting annoyed at commercial news broadcasts.

At first the public welcomed sponsored programs and accepted the incidental advertising as a natural way of paying for the service. It was all right as long as the "blurb" was a minor incident, handled briefly and courteously. As the sales talk lengthened, it was still endured, but the audience began to get restive. Soon the public was given two separate earfuls of salesmanship on one program. Then it grew to three, and lately there are sometimes as many as four different appeals in the course of a fifteen-minute feature.

Naturally in this process the information that the listener wants to hear grows less and loses in quality, because the speaker has no fair chance to do a good job. And the advertising itself deteriorates. Much of it drops to the style of old-fashioned auctioneering or snake-oil vending. And it so offends many listeners that thousands of them are refusing to listen, or grimly deciding not to buy the articles hawked so disagreeably.

STIMULATED INVENTION

Glass will be adapted to many new uses, as military needs stop the use of metals for civilian purposes.

"I have seen a glass toaster," says an official of the General Electric Company, "in which you can actually see the bread turning from white to golden brown." There is also a glass iron which will produce a smoother surface on ironed goods than today's irons do. These suggest only a part of what is already in view.

Design and production of such things apparently will thrive as more familiar objects and materials are absorbed in defense priorities. It used to be easy to laugh at "ersatz" products. Today we begin to realize that many of them are not temporary substitutes, but permanent additions to our economy. It is a humbling fact that we might never have developed many of the new, improved products now coming to the fore had not war in another part of the world brought about a shortage of products to which we have long been accustomed.

Wonder what's become of Rudolf Hess. Surely Mr. Churchill hasn't "liquidated" him, as Hitler would probably do with an English fugitive in a similar situation.

Speaking of split seconds—the Remington Arms Company has a device that can split a second one thousand ways. Don't ask us why.

Anyway, America's swinging back to normal as far as Thanksgiving Day is concerned, and many a patriotic bosom rests easier.

Whenever things get worse, they give Fiorella La Guardia another job.

A friend who went all out for defense now says he's all in.

TRYING TO PREVENT HAY FEVER

The fact that hay fever, asthma, and eczema are closely related and "run" in some families has been well established; the grandfather may have hay fever, the son or daughter, asthma, and the grandchild, eczema. Or perhaps it may be the other way around. While this does not mean that every member of the family will be afflicted with one of these three ailments, it does mean that they are "likely" to be afflicted if they come in contact with certain substances—pollen from plants and trees, house dust, various odors, and certain foods. Sometimes a defect of nose and throat will set up symptoms, whether or not these ailments run in the family.

While most cases of true hay fever occur in the autumn, due to the pollen of ragweed, "there is the spring type due to tree pollen such as the oak, birch, maple, elm, hickory and cottonwood and the summer type almost always due to pollen of grasses, timothy, June grass, orchard grass, and red top."

When the symptoms—sneezing, itching of eyes and nose, "running" of eyes and nose, stuffiness of ears, and fear of light—occur at "any" time during the Spring, Summer and Fall seasons, they are usually due to furs, feathers and foods. The first thought in the treatment is to try to locate the cause by using skin and other tests of the substances that usually cause the symptoms.

In the "real" hay fever, as the ragweed type is usually called, destroying the ragweed in the neighborhood or going to a pollen-free climate for the weeks during which the pollen is in the air, will prevent symptoms.

The usual method of prevention is injecting ragweed pollen extract under the skin about six weeks before the usual onset of the pollen season. However, hay fever specialists are now advising that these injections should be started three or four months before the season starts. The injections are given every 5 or 7 days, beginning with a weak solution and gradually increasing the strength to a point just short of a reaction.

Sprays of ephedrine and epinephrine (adrenalin) or remedies containing either of these drugs or used as "drops" are usually effective in relieving the symptoms.

Allergy
Hay fever, asthma, eczema, hives, stomach upsets, are just a few of the many symptoms due to allergy or sensitiveness to various foods and other substances. ON THE HOP WITH "THE LITTLE FLOWER"

By Bressler

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinnett

Washington—Jim Preston, who works for Archives and probably carries more facts, historical and contemporary, about Washington than any other man in these parts, and I were chewing the rag.

Somehow we got to discussing the subject of women being drafted for national defense.

"Whether women should be drafted or shouldn't," said Jim, "is somebody else's argument—not mine—but American women have been fighting their men's battles with them ever since there was a country."

"Why, right here in the files and records in this building are scores of stories—not just about women who went nursing the sick and wounded—but about women who shouldered a gun and did their share of the shooting, too. They did it in the Civil War and in the Indian wars and in the Revolution—in fact in just about every scrap on American soil."

"Of course every school kid knows about Molly Pitcher, but I'll bet there are few if any who ever heard of the strange case of Deborah Sampson."

Started in Massachusetts

"Her story started up in Massachusetts when a fellow named Robert Shurtliff joined one of the Massachusetts regiments in April of 1781. This fellow Shurtliff, it seems, was a good soldier and if the colonists in those days had had time to knock out a lot of medals, he probably would have gotten one. In a way, he did get one—but that's getting ahead of the yarn."

"It was at the battle of Red Bank that Shurtliff, in there pitching lead as fast as his old muzzle-loader could be stoked and fired, got on the receiving end of a bullet. His pals carried him out of the battle and back to one of those emergency hospitals, probably in some little farmhouse, and then—the army surgeon discovered he wasn't Robert Shurtliff at all, but Deborah Sampson."

"Deborah must have done a little fast talking, because the army surgeon kept her secret. She got well, rejoined the army, was with General Washington when Lord Cornwallis surrendered, and was honorably discharged in November, 1783."

"Now, to get along to the way Deborah was honored. That year or the next, Deborah married a fellow named Benjamin Gannett. And Deborah put in her application for a pension and got it—$48 a year at first and later on, $76.80. She and Benjamin lived together until she died at 43 years and then Deborah died."

Took an Ace of Congress

"And here's how we got the story. Gannett, the widower of a soldier who had been pensioned for years, petitioned Congress—with all the evidence—claiming that he was entitled to the same consideration as the widow of a pensioned soldier and that the pension should be continued."

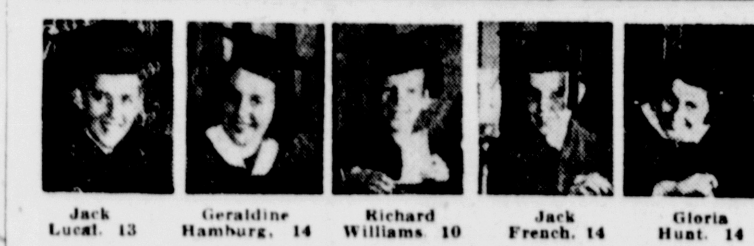

"It took an act of Congress to do it, but darned if Congress didn't act. Come on out to the files. I've got the minutes of Congress right here and all the documents in the case."

"And darned if Jim hadn't. There it was, in flowing script, setting forth that since the annals of this country 'furnish no other similar example of female heroism, fidelity and courage' as displayed by Deborah Sampson, her widow, Benjamin Gannett should receive a pension of $80 a year for the rest of his days."

Congress has never granted another "medal" like that.

United States Never Has Permitted Foreign Nation to Dictate American Use of High Seas

(By DAVID LAWRENCE)

Washington, May 27.—Back in 1917, the head of the German navy issued a threat that all neutral vessels would be sunk at sight without warning if they entered the seas adjacent to Europe—and it led to American participation in the war.

The head of the German navy—Admiral Raeder—has issued another threat in May, 1941 and it may well be that history will repeat itself.

Never has the United States permitted a foreign government to dictate how it may use the high seas. Never has the United States submitted heretofore to the orders of another government's navy as to how its own vessels may proceed.

American participation in the last war came as the result of the blunt challenge of the German government together with a German attack on American citizens and their properties.

Admiral Raeder's threat of attack is the first formal one that has come from the German government expressing an avowed intent to attack American naval vessels if they should attempt to protect the commerce of the United States.

The right to convoy American vessels or even to afford protection to the neutral vessels of other countries if they are unharmed and are engaged in commerce on the high seas is traditional. If the Nazis insist on depriving the vessels and property of the United States from transit on the high seas, this will be the first invasion of American rights which will have come from Berlin in the second world war.

So far as American rights and interests are concerned, the doctrine hitherto followed is that to submit on one front today is to be compelled to submit on another tomorrow. Either international law as understood and followed by the United States in the past will be respected by the German navy or else the American government will be faced with the question of whether it wishes to back up its rights with force.

This concrete issue has long been in the background, but it has not been believed that the Nazis would venture to put it to the test. Even now the belief here is that the Raeder statement is mere bluster put out for propaganda effect and does not represent Hitler policy—at least not on the basis of events as thus far developed.

President Roosevelt made his promise to keep the American people out of war "except in case of attack." Is a threat from the Nazi admiralty to sink at sight American merchant ships an "attack"? It was so construed by President Wilson who asked Congress on April 6, 1917, not to declare war, but to recognize a state of war as having existed because of the attack made by German submarines on American lives and property.

The first real attack on American citizens came to light only a few days ago in the official announcement that the neutral ship Zamzam had been attacked. American citizens report that the vessel was shelled. Although in this case no lives were lost, the placing of the lives of American citizens in jeopardy on the high seas is an offense against the security of America as proclaimed in the diplomatic notes exchanged between the United States and Germany from 1915 to 1917.

Although the Congress has passed restrictive legislation to prevent American citizens from accepting the hazards of sea voyages in war time, the United States never waived her rights under international law. There are certain full errands which history confirms may be undertaken in wartime, and for the navy of a belligerent to shell an unarmed vessel without warning and to attack any neutral vessels or even the unarmed merchant vessels of belligerent countries carrying American citizens is an attack against the United States under the present conception of American sea rights under international law.

The German navy's threat to engage in "shooting" if American commerce is conveyed to Europe becomes a historic event. For the United States Government cannot let it go unrefuted. It is true the statement was not made in the form of a diplomatic note, but its authenticity is unquestioned. To permit the statement to go by would be construed as acquiescence and might form a dangerous precedent. The department of state no doubt will take cognizance of the threat either by public statement or by a note of warning to the German government.

The defense of the Nazis is that under international law, any belligerent can proclaim a blockade and neutrals are bound to respect it. But a blockade under international law cannot include all of the seven seas nor can it embrace areas that are not effectively patrolled in such a way as to prevent ingress or egress of the blockaded country's vessels. The fact that shipping is entering and leaving England makes the blockade "ineffective" in the legal sense in which the term is used.

There is another point in international law governing the search and seizure of neutral and belligerent vessels. The United States has not altered since the last war its position that warfare at sea as it concerns merchant ships must be conducted on a humane basis. This means that vessels must be halted and searched, and if captured they must be taken to a belligerent port, the lives of the passengers and crew being safeguarded.

It will be contended, of course, that a submarine cannot halt a merchant ship and take time to conduct a search, but so far as the United States is concerned it does not recognize the use of the submarine as an instrument of inhuman or illegal warfare. Admiral Raeder may have issued his statement merely to crystallize American isolationist sentiment and to strike fear among those Americans who are fearful of the Nazi power, but he has unwittingly perhaps given the department of state a convenient springboard for a discussion of the rules of sea warfare which can have a material bearing on the assertion of an American right later on to use convoys to protect its vessels and citizens against illegal use of sea power by the Nazis. Convoys then become a form of protective or armed neutrality for which there is ample precedent in American history without a declaration of war. (Reproduction rights reserved).

Big Demand Reported For Superphosphate

Ithaca, N. Y., May 27.—About 50,000 tons of superphosphate, furnished for use in the agricultural conservation program, will be spread on New York state farms sometime before August 31. That is the amount ordered up to May 1, at which time many counties stopped taking orders because of lack of supply, it is reported.

Don J. Wickham, deputy executive assistant, says the unexpectedly high demand for superphosphate under the program, accompanied by similar demands by individuals for private use and by shipments to England, has nearly drained the existing supply of superphosphate available for use on the summer.

It is reported, however, that most companies have reserved enough to supply their own trade.

Orders for lime under the conservation program reached a total of 165,000 tons on May 1, Mr. Wickham announces.

Literary Guide

By JOHN SELBY

"Desert Country," by Edwin Corle.

Another series is born. This series will be called "American Folkways," and its general editor will be Erskine Caldwell, whose major experience with folkways has been in producing "Tobacco Road" and other novels of its kind, and a couple of picture books with his wife, Margaret Bourke White. So far six books are projected, and one has reached this desk: "Desert Country," by Edwin Corle.

"Desert Country" is a grand book, barring a little superfluous comment on "space time" and such like. The purpose of the first of the Folkways series is to catch the spirit of the American Southwest, considering Nevada and western Utah part of that territory. This Mr. Corle does, in a somewhat less obvious manner than usual.

He tells the tall tales and legends of the district, but which none is more colorful. But he applies this as an artist does color to a canvas, not for the sake of the pigment itself, but to form a lucid and reasonably attractive whole. It is strange how few of our workers in regional literature ever get round to this method. As for the material—

It is perhaps natural that his long chapter dealing with the newspapers of the district should amuse me most, and that of the lot Fred H. Hart's "Reese River Reveille" should stick best in my mind. The Reveille was published in Austin, Nev., which was a tough town like Tombstone or Panamint, but just an ordinary western town. Mr. Hart's paper was a daily, and he was hard put to it for news, sometimes. It led him into by-paths of odd kinds. These, over the years, have become one of the best mirrors of western life we have. Mr. Corle quotes a few of these stories, and the one which describes a Fourth of July in the White Pine district—an event for which everything useful was more or less accounted for except a flag—is perhaps the best.

The rattlers, the gold, the six-guns, the silver, the mirages and Joshua trees and Indians and Mexicans are all in Mr. Corle's book. So are the filling stations and roadhouses of today.

Bismarck Is Sunk By British Navy

command said, "until finally on the morning of May 27 it fell victim to superior strength."

Ship's Last Message

Berlin radio reported that the Bismarck's last message read: "Ship out of control. Will fight to the last shell. Long live the Fuehrer!"

The fleeing Nazi raider was reported heading for refuge from pursuing British warships in a French port, either Brest or St. Nazaire, when torpedo-carrying planes from the British aircraft carrier Ark Royal sent her to the bottom—the first battleship ever reported sunk by aerial attack.

An American-made Catalina plane was credited with first spotting the Bismarck, bringing other planes and British warships to deliver the coup de grace to the already twice-wounded German craft.

Authoritative quarters in London said the 35,000-ton battleship Prince of Wales, sister ship of the King George V, participated in the flaming sea battle which sent the Bismarck to her doom.

Thus swift revenge came to the British for the sinking of the 42,000-ton battle cruiser Hood, pride of the British navy, which was blown to bits Saturday by a shell hit in her powder magazine during a clash with the Bismarck.

More than two hours after the British admiral's announcement of the sinking, the Germans officially acknowledged that the Bismarck had been sent to the bottom this morning after "fighting to the last hand grenade."

The Germans said that the Bismarck's speed had been hampered by a hit in the prow during the battle with the Hood, and that later the same day she was further slowed by an aerial torpedo hit.

Presumably, the Bismarck had a complement of 1,300 to 1,500 officers and men on board—about the same number carried by the Hood.

Unless she struck her colors before being sent to the bottom, few could be expected to survive.

The fate of other ships in the German force was not disclosed, but London dispatches had previously said that the fleeing Bismarck headed a squadron, and British sources declared that ships engaged in pursuit of the Germans probably included the 33,950-ton battleships Rodney and Nelson—and possibly the royal navy's newest and most powerful battle-wagons, the 35,000-ton King George V and the Prince of Wales.

High official quarters in London subsequently announced that "measures are being taken" to deal with the German cruiser Prince Eugen, which had been escorting the Bismarck.

The London admiral issued a 22-word statement to tell the first story of what may have been the counterpart of the 1914-18 World War battle of Jutland, as follows: "The German battleship Bismarck has been sunk by our naval forces. Details of the operations will be announced as soon as possible."

The admiral had announced last night that the British plane had damaged the Bismarck with a torpedo hit—apparently slowing up the speedy sea raider until pursuing British warships could close in for the kill.

Three Capital Ships Sinking of the Bismarck—presumably left Germany with only three capital ships—the brand-new 35,000-ton Tirpitz, sister ship of the Bismarck; and the Gneisenau and the Scharnhorst, both 26,000 tons, which the British say have been repeatedly bombed in Brest harbor, Nazi-occupied France, since mid-March.

With a top speed of at least 30 knots, the Bismarck had slipped away from other British men of war immediately after the fight with the Hood, somewhere between Greenland and Iceland, in which the Hood's 1,300-odd officers and men were believed to have perished.

Even with the loss of the Hood and the battleship Royal Oak, torpedoed by a German U-boat at Scapa Flow early in the war, Britain still has 15 battleships and battle cruisers—the same number she had in commission when the war broke out.

Germany entered the conflict with five battleships and pocket battleships. Besides the Bismarck, she lost the pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee, scuttled by her own crew at Montevideo in December, 1939, after she was damaged in a fight with British naval units.

Elsewhere at sea, the Germans reported that Nazi U-boats had sunk 14 freighters totalling about 77,600 tons off the West African coast.

In the eight-day-old battle of Crete, authoritative London quarters challenged claims by the German high command that the British had lost 11 cruisers, eight destroyers, five torpedo boats and a submarine in the eastern Mediterranean during the conflict.

These quarters acknowledged loss of only two cruisers and four destroyers, with two battleships and "several other cruisers" damaged.

A London spokesman said British-Greek Allied troops had inflicted "very heavy losses" on the Nazi aerial invaders and that reinforcements were now reaching the Allied garrison.

"The fighting has been most bitter and severe, and enemy losses up to the present have been much heavier than ours," the spokesman said.

He declared that the outcome of the battle, raging "with indescribable fury" at Cania, Retimo and Candia, "at this moment... hangs in the balance."

Prevents Landing

Britain's navy so far has prevented any big-scale landing of German troops by sea, the spokesman said, although a few shiploads of Nazi soldiers in Greek caiques (small boats) may have slipped through.

"Very heavy losses have been inflicted by our submarines, cruisers and destroyers upon transports and upon those small Greek ships. It is not possible to state with accuracy how many thousands of the enemy troops have been drowned."

The Germans reported that a steady stream of reinforcements had bolstered their offensive in Crete, where a drive—possibly to be brought to a climax by an attack with tanks the Germans ferried to the island by plane—was developing near the capital, Cania.

That city, like Candia and Retimo, was reported by the British to be in ruins from Nazi bombing. The British regarded the Nazi thrust toward Cania from the Malemi airport, 10 miles to the southwest as a desperate attempt to gain a landing place for seaborne troops and supplies.

The British reported their own air force taking a hand in the fight, bombing Nazi troop-carriers as they landed and fighting them in the air. A German claim that dive-bombers scored hits on a British aircraft carrier in the Eastern Mediterranean indicated the British planes are striking from closer range than the North African desert bases they used last week.

At Washington President Roosevelt studied the latest war developments as he put the finishing touches on his "fireside chat" for a broadcast at 9:30 p. m. (E.S.T.). There were no official hints that the speech would cover, but the White House did not discourage the increasing impression that the address would rank with the most significant made by the President.

Car Leaves Road And Three Escape Without Injuries

A car driven by Larry O. Leal, Delhi cattle dealer, who was returning home after a trip to Kingston, left the road on Route 28 at Glenford last night and was damaged. Neither Leal, Carl J. Hamilton, proprietor of the Delhi Motors Co., owner of the car, and Clara Collins of Stony Hollow, who were riding in the car, reported injuries.

Leal told Deputy Sheriff Vredenburg and O'Brien, who investigated the accident, that the car left the road when he fell asleep at the wheel. It crossed to the left and scraped along the rocky embankment for some distance before coming to a stop.

Leal was arrested when he could not produce a chauffeur's or operator's license and was taken before Justice Charles R. Tiller of West Hurley, who imposed a fine of $5. He was ordered to produce the license at four o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Allotment Received

Treasurer Pratt Boice of the Ulster County Agricultural Society today received from the State Department of Agriculture and Markets a check in the amount of $4,691.97, being state allotment of public money for agricultural fairs. The money reimburses the society for premiums paid at the one-day fair and farmers' field day held at Forsyth Park last August. Mr. Boice said that the payment this year is one of the best received in some time.

Wrong Motto

BY NORMAN CHANDLER, CHAIRMAN, NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS COMMITTEE

"HEAR no evil, see no evil, speak no evil," the orientals tell us, is the message of the three little monkeys.

Sorry, but it won't do for a newspaper in a democracy. The publishers would like nothing better than to report fair weather, pure honesty, straight charity, good deeds in every column they print.

But what if a storm is coming? What if a political or business miscreant steals a million or robs the poor or ignores a public trust? Don't you think it is important for you to know of these things?

HOW CAN YOU PROTECT YOURSELF—from the misdeeds of nature or of men—if you do not KNOW? True, there are sometimes false alarms. The storm may veer, the miscreant may be falsely accused or too harshly accused.

But, again, such wrongs are easily righted where alert, free and competitive newspapers exist. All of us know the very human satisfaction we get from exposing the weakness or failure of a rival—and among newspapers the rivalry to be accurate, to be FIRST with the RIGHT news gives every editor a wholesome respect for the truth.

THE NEWSPAPER IS THE GUARDIAN whom you set to watch your fellow men. If there were not watchers—and REPORTERS—do you suppose a scandal would ever be exposed? Could you expect a grafting officeholder or an incompetent leader in any field to come forth VOLUNTARILY and confess his sins?

Or, on the other hand, how could a loyal and honest official who had ferreted out corruption get the news to you if the newspapers followed the philosophy of the little monkeys?

We newspaper publishers aren't telling you these things to impress you with OUR virtues. We are only trying to show you how to use one of the sharpest weapons of democracy—freedom of speech and opinion.

As INDIVIDUAL publishers, we must sink or swim according to our ability to serve our individual readers. But COLLECTIVELY, the SYSTEM of maintaining a press independent of all censorship is a "must" in a democratic form of government.

Over 300 leading newspaper publishers join together to bring you this weekly message about the function of the press in a free nation. Newspaper Publishers Committee, 420 Lexington Ave., New York.

Two can live cheaper than one, but the average bachelor would rather pay the difference and stay single.

When refreshments were served Helen refused a second helping of ice cream with a polite, "No, thanks," although she looked a bit downcast.

Hostess—Do have some more. Little Girl—Mother told me to say "No, thank you" but I don't believe she knew how small the dishes were going to be.

Here's Our Recipe
When you pray for the best Your hope and trust quickens But to make sure your quest Better work like the dickens

A man wanted to ship some limburger cheese and convinced the idea of putting it in a coffin. At each stop he would walk up to the baggage car to see that everything was all right. At one of the stops the baggage man inquired, "Is this a relative of yours?" "Yes, it's my brother," answered the traveler. "Well," said the baggage man, "you don't need to worry. He's dead all right."

How we do worry about things we can't control, such as floods, thunderstorms and wars in Europe!

Just for a change why don't we do something about the things we can control. For example, none of us can lengthen his span of life, perhaps, beyond the hands of destiny, but we can control its width and depth. Nor is it given to us to control the contour of our countenance, but we can control its expression—we can smile instead of frown. We cannot alter the distance of our heads above the ground but we can control the heights of their contents—we can think high thoughts. We have no control over the weather, but we can control the moral atmosphere that surrounds us. We cannot control the other fellow's annoying habits, but we can do something about our own.

If we all controlled what we can control this would be a better world in every way.

For hours a picket walking up and down a busy street carrying a sign which was absolutely blank. Asked what was the big idea, he replied, "I'm looking for a sponsor."

Doris tells of a girl who has an engagement ring but is afraid to wear it till she is sure that he can keep up the payments.

Timid Woman—Do you keep refrigerators?
Snappy Salesman—No, lady. We sell them.

Timid Woman—Well, you'll keep the one you were going to sell to me. Good morning.

A fair weather is one who will borrow your umbrella and over-shoulders when the rain of adversity begins to fall.

Visitor—I've heard a lot about you.
Local Man—Well, you can't prove anything.

The fellow who decides to have a rock garden instead of one of vegetables is not doing quite the right thing by his neighbors chickens.

John—Teacher, can someone be pushed for something he didn't go?

Teacher—Why, no, of course not.
John—Well, I haven't done my arithmetic.

Most of the temperamental people you meet are just plain cranks who are unable to take hard luck with a smile.

HOME BUREAU

Modena Unit
Modena, May 26—The Modena Home Bureau unit conducted a business meeting Friday, May 23, at Mrs. Myron Coons' home near Plattkill. An all-day meeting was in session, with pot-luck luncheon served at noon. Reports on the advisory council meeting at Accord were given and of other activities of the unit. Progress on the cotton-mattress project, which was started Tuesday in the former post office building in Modena, was also discussed. About eight ladies are taking advantage of the surplus cotton distributed by the government and are making mattresses of their own particular type and pattern. Miss Eberle Parsons, home demonstration agent of Kingston, supervised the construction of the mattresses. Mrs. Harry Sutton of Clintondale, Mrs. Eddred Smith and daughter, Genevieve, Mrs. George Altheusen, Mrs. Ira Hyatt, Mrs. Eber Coy, Mrs. Roy Jensen, Mrs. Gershom Mount of Ardonia, Mrs. Christian Matheson, Mrs. Myron Shultis, Mrs. Lester Arnold, Mrs. Joseph Hasbrouck, Mrs. Lillie Butler, Mrs. Elizabeth Foster, the hostesses, Mrs. Myron Coons and Miss Mary Anderson of Plattkill. Mrs. Knapp was accompanied by a guest from Middletown. The annual picnic of the local unit will be held Thursday, June 12, at Mrs. Joseph E. Hasbrouck's home in Modena.

THE SACRED DAGGER

By RITA MOHLER HANSON

YESTERDAY: Anne Willard and her two companions have been captured on their way to her father's camp in the Mongolian desert. Their captor is taking Blaze Sherwood and Pete Mackey to the Emir, but a native woman has disguised Anne as an old hag, and is slipping her into the Emir's palace, where one of the ruler's wives will try to help her escape. By accident both parties are spending the night in the same inn, and Blaze has penetrated Anne's disguise.

Chapter Eight

Magic Cure

Mackey grinned. "Then maybe the first guy with nerve enough to take the dagger wins Miss Willard."

"May be," agreed Sherwood. "Anne laughed mischievously. 'You notice that Dr. Sherwood refused to take it?'"

Mackey's eyes began to twinkle. "If you could see yourself, my girl, you'd understand why."

Anne laughed again and rubbed more soot on her face. Sherwood looked at her. "By the way, Doddad is here."

"Your friend the seer?"

"Yes, mother," he teased. "He is posing as your son."

"That one! How extraordinary!"

"He said that if I ever got into trouble and needed him he'd come where I was," Sherwood grinned. "I must be in trouble."

He seems to be able to go anywhere he wants to go. He was educated in India and England. He's been to America. A year or so ago I became lost and wound up in his monastery on the Shani Lun side of the Bekkan Bula mountains. He met me with the greeting, 'Welcome, Rimpoché. I've been expecting you for a week.' It was in his monastery that I learned about Shy-a Nago. He hears voices and sees visions. I never believe him until the event occurs. But it is astonishing how often he is right."

They had forgotten Mackey who sat listening, holding his aching jaw.

"Does that lama know?" asked Anne, "that I carry the Nagara dagger?"

"He told me two months ago that you would come and receive it."

"I didn't know it myself two months ago," she cried.

"There you are," he shrugged. "Does he predict that you and the Prince of Shani Lun will take Shy-a Nago away from my father?"

"Not exactly," Sherwood said, leaning back on his elbow on the platform so that she could not see his face, "but he says that the time has come for the treasure to be revealed."

"Is this the prophecy my father spoke of in his notes?"

"Dr. Oliver and the members of your father's Expedition should know," he answered evasively. "Do not under any circumstances let the dagger out of your possession."

Mackey groaned. "I wish she'd use it to cut my throat." Sherwood looked at him sympathetically.

"Maybe Doddad can relieve you. Some of these native magicians have remarkable healing powers."

Doddad agreed readily to do something for Mackey's toothache. The latter, looking a bit foolish that he should lend himself to such hocus pocus, obeyed the command to seat himself on a sheepskin, cross legged, his back against the wall. Though the other men were Mohammedan if anything, they crouched down to watch the ceremony.

The lama passed his hands lightly over Mackey's face and throat and chest, fingered his spinal column and shook his finger tips as if to toss off poison. He stared into the white man's eyes intently for a moment, then raised his voice in a familiar chant.

"Better now?" he asked. Mackey blinked. "I don't know." The lama's manner changed to a certain impishness. He made more passes before Mackey's face, and finally, by a clever slight of hand drew an eagle's claw from Mackey's ear, which object, he declared, had caused the pain.

"Hell," cried Mackey, grabbing the claw and jumping to his feet with an indignant look at Sherwood, "trying to make a monkey out of me, eh?"

Sherwood grinned. "How's the toothache?"

A blank look came over Mackey's face. He put his hand to his jaw and pinched and probed a bit before he answered reluctantly. "The darn thing seems to have quit hurting."

"Here's hoping you'll have a good night's sleep," said Sherwood.

To The Emir

THE headman rose and the other men followed him out. Presently the lama returned bringing Anne's big traveling case. She didn't know how he had contrived to get it and she didn't ask. But it was good to realize there were clean and decent clothes in her possession even though she dare not wear them. "Thank you, Doddad," she said as he turned to leave.

He bowed to her. "I give you advice, Trust Sherwood, Rimpoché. The master is foolish sometimes—but trust him—you're foolish too."

New Soil Program To Assist Vineyard Farmers of Region

Frank E. Gaffney, chairman of the Ulster County Agricultural Conservation Committee has been advised of a new practice for the 1941 conservation program under which farmers may be paid for the removal of diseased or unproductive grape vines, including the wire and posts. Land from which the vines have been removed shall not be used for the growing of any crop other than grasses, biennial or perennial legumes or green manure crops during the 1941 program year. Payment for this practice may

Anne started after his retreat—back. Then she gave herself a little shake. "He's right, Anne Willard—you're foolish in more ways than one."

The next afternoon they came to the edge of the oasis that made up Arishar, the capital city of Yangsar. Canals lined with willow and mulberry followed the road. Paddy fields that would later be flooded for rice planting, stretched away on either side. Here the country was gay with spring, acacia in full leaf, and apricots and peaches, round green buttons on the trees.

Under the shadow of the city wall Anne bade her white friends goodnight. They were well ahead of the main caravan. Khalima struggled with Anne's donkey to keep him from following them off the road.

"Farewell," said Anne lightly, "have a good time in jail."

"Watch your step in the harem," Mackey warned her. Sherwood walked over and stood beside her. They gazed at each other for a moment in silence. Then she said: "You're looking at me as father does when he's going to tell me something for my own good."

"I feel as responsible as a father," he said in a troubled voice. "This is no place for a kid like you. Have you plenty of money?"

"Sufficient," she assured him. "And I'm no kid. I'm as self-reliant as you are. I can take care of myself."

"That's all you know about it!" he said, his voice gruff with restrained emotion. "When I think of some of the things that can and do happen in this country... Well, it's on the knees of the gods I guess! I don't know whether my own credentials as a member of the government of Shani Lun will rate me a toss into prison or a bid to the palace. You can never tell the mood of these petty tyrants. If things go right with you, make for Chuka, which is just across the border."

"Thanks. Anything I can do for you when I arrive there?"

"If you hear I'm juggled you might notify the Prince of Shani Lun. Then his mood lightened."

"This fool lama vows we'll come out of it all right so it might be just as well to believe him. Optimism is no more stupid than pessimism."

"If as stupid," said Anne, her smile revealing the pretty girl back of the old witch make-up. His eyes caught the vision.

"I suppose I shouldn't kiss you," "My face too dirty?" she asked mischievously, feeling safe behind her soot.

"I'd risk that," he grinned, "but Mackey might think he was entitled to the same privilege."

Her eyes widened. "And why not—Turk?"

"I'll call him over," he said swiftly. She caught his arm. "Silly. You know I was fooling."

"It's dangerous to fool with me," His expression sobered.

The Princess

SHE laughed, a bit stirred by his distress. She wished she knew what was in his mind.

"As Mackey says, do watch your step," he pleaded softly. "I'm afraid things won't go as smoothly as you think, and if you should need help, for God's sake get word to me." He stepped back and let loose the donkey's bridle.

"Goodbye, precious one."

"Goodbye," she answered, her eyes suddenly filling with tears. Now she recalled the meaning of the word Rimpoché. It was good to be called precious once more.

They rode along the narrow street of the bazaars; they passed through an arch by a bell tower and came into the square before the mosque where beggars and holy men lay in the welcome sunshine. Anne did not know when Doddad left them, but as they came at last to the wall of the Emir's palace on rising ground above the river she saw that he had disappeared.

Khalima knocked at an obscure gate in the wall and was admitted to a kitchen courtyard, donkey and all. She and her mother greeted each other warmly and the other servants gathered round to welcome her. They took Anne to the Princess at once, just as she was opening a door into a tiled courtyard with a marble tank sunk in the center, a pine tree at one end and rose vines climbing on it.

In a raised boudoir off the courtyard the Princess, with other ladies of the palace, sat on a water pipe passed round the circle. She was a dark-skinned, middle-aged woman with heavy lidded eyes, a little moustache, and hair that hung in hennaed wisps about her face.

Her boredom lifted as Khalima unfolded Anne's story for her ear alone. She rose from the rug and motioned them to follow her into a private room.

Drawing Anne to the light she rubbed a hennaed finger on her face to expose the fair skin beneath, examined the long, slender hands and almond-shaped nails, pushed back the shawl to expose the chestnut hair.

"Yallah! You are beautiful," she said. "I will help you. My husband, the Emir, shall not know. She clasped her hands and servants appeared followed by the seven ladies of the harem. Anne never did get them all straightened out.

ELLENVILLE

Ellenville, May 26—Mrs. S. Schults of New York has been spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Sondak.

A supper meeting of the Methodist Brotherhood was held Tuesday evening, May 27. The Rev. George R. Turner of Grahamsville was the guest speaker.

Miss Lois Evans of Schenectady was a week-end guest at the home of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Herpe.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kemmerer of New York spent two days during the week with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Vanderlyn.

Glamour Is Spinach—Or Something Like That

By ROBERT E. GEIGER

AP Feature Service Writer

Norman, Okla. — And what's glamour made of?

Well, sir, Miss Ima James, head of the women's physical education department at the University of Oklahoma, made a study of 1920 coeds compared with those of 1941 and decided glamour has something to do with spinach. But it's more complicated than that.

In 1920 fifty per cent of the girls enrolled in physical education at Oklahoma had flat feet. Eighty-five per cent were underweight.

Like the Change in Cars

Miss James doesn't issue a mathematical rating, but she gives the impression the 1920 flapper and the 1941 glamour gal, from health and posture standpoints, are about as different as the 1920 high-wheeled auto and some of today's sleek 105-horsepower jobs.

"Saddle oxfords are a decided improvement over three-inch heels," she says, noting that flat feet are a decided handicap to glamour.

"There's been a general improvement in meal planning, and the discovery of vitamins insures the proper intake of body building materials."

"We hinder the development of poor posture with our better lighting and early correction of poor vision. In the attempt to lay an early foundation for good health we have placed more importance on proper school seating and junior furniture in the home."

More Emphasis on Clothing

Then, too, she says, the emphasis on proper clothing has been increased. She advocates sweater-skirt school wear.

So there you are. She didn't mention spinach by name but glamour, as she describes it, must be made of stuff like that, plus attractive, comfortable shoes, decorative and comfortable clothing and relaxing furniture—plus something pretty good to start with in the first place, probably.

Discrimination in Employment Charged

Albany, N. Y., May 26—Employees who wilfully make a false statement or representation to obtain unemployment insurance benefits stand to lose at least five weeks but not more than 13 weeks of benefits once the offense is discovered, according to an amendment to the Unemployment Insurance Law explained today by Milton O. Loysen, executive director of the Division of Placement and Unemployment Insurance.

"This amendment, enacted at the last session of the legislature, gives the administration another effective weapon for dealing with fraudulent and chiseling benefit seekers," declared Mr. Loysen. "In addition to losing their benefits for from five to thirteen weeks, chiselers will also have to repay all money they received as a result of their fraud and they are also liable to criminal prosecution for committing a misdemeanor." Mr. Loysen also pointed out that another portion of this amendment provides that employees who lose their jobs because of misconduct, a strike, lockout, or other industrial controversy shall not begin to accumulate benefit rights until seven weeks have elapsed. Then they must undergo the usual three-week waiting period.

"The effectiveness of both of these measures," said Mr. Loysen, "depends in large measure on the cooperation the division receives from employers. If employers are prompt in returning the forms we send them asking why benefit applicants were cut from the payroll, if they report disqualifying causes as they are expected to do, these measures cannot miss their objective. Otherwise the administration is at a great disadvantage in seeing that justice is done. Both these measures become effective on September 29 of this year."

Acknowledges Shooting

New City, N. Y., May 26 (P)—Walter Grob, a 19-year-old houseboy described by the prosecution as a youth who made Nordic supremacy his "ruling passion," acknowledged in Rockland County Court today the shooting last January 19 of his employer, Percival Wilcox Whittlesey, an active pro-British worker. Grob was permitted to withdraw his innocent plea and plead guilty to a charge of second degree assault while armed. County Judge John A. McKenna said he would pronounce sentence sometime next week.

Bodies Are Found
Today in East River

New York, May 27 (AP)—The bodies of three soldiers who drowned in the East river May 15 when a Fort Slocum army launch sank after a collision with the Lehigh Valley tug Claremont were recovered today.

The body of Sgt. Henry J. Moroso, 25, native of Columbia, S. C., skipper of the launch Q11, was found by a police launch about three miles downstream from the site of the collision and was later identified by his brother, John A. Moroso, 3rd, Associated Press news reporter.

A few hours earlier a junkboat operator found the body of Private Clyde Fleming of Pittsburgh in the upper bay about a mile from the position of the river crash. Fort Slocum officers identified it.

While these identifications were being made, a police launch came upon another body floating in East river. It was clothed in an army uniform, and although identification was not immediately made, officers said they were sure it was that of Private Melvin Calton of Kings Creek, Ky.

To Resume Vaccination
Program in City in Fall

Dr. L. E. Sanford, health officer, said today that the vaccination program suspended in the city's schools during the winter would be resumed in the fall, after the schools had re-opened following the summer vacation. He said the program had been suspended during the outbreak of scarlet fever in the schools.

However, said the health officer, if parents of school children wished to have them immunized against diphtheria or vaccinated against smallpox the parents should bring the children to the weekly free clinics held in the city hall every Tuesday afternoon from 3 to 4 o'clock.

Some spots in Chile have as much as 216 inches of rain a year.

Advisory Group
Is Named Today
Kingston Branch Workers to Meet Wednesday

Mayor C. J. Heiselman has appointed the following campaign advisory committee of the Kingston branch of the United Service Organizations for National Defense, which is a nation-wide organization composed of the Young Men's Christian Association, the National Catholic Community Service, the Salvation Army, the Young Women's Christian Association, the Jewish Welfare Board and the Travelers Aid Association.

During the first World War, the various service organizations raised funds separately with which to render service to members of the armed forces of our country while in camp and in combat and leave areas.

During the present emergency, however, in order to avoid duplication of effort, all service organizations of all creeds have joined together in one organization called the United Service Organizations.

The federal government has appropriated $15,000,000 with which to build recreation centers for the men in army and navy camps. These buildings are now being built in the communities nearest these military and naval camps in order to provide a wholesome place of recreation for the boys in uniform.

On June 3 President Roosevelt will open, with a radio address, the nationwide campaign to raise $10,000,000 dollars to be handed over to the United Service Organizations to pay the expenses of conducting these recreation centers built by public funds. District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey of New York is national campaign chairman.

Mayor Heiselman has been asked to appoint a local committee to plan for raising Kingston's quota of $4,700 and such other funds as may be necessary for advertising, etc.

The mayor has called the first meeting of the advisory committee for tomorrow, Wednesday, afternoon at 5 o'clock in the city court room, and urges all members to be present at that time.

Those appointed are: Allen A. Baker, Pratt Boice, Eugene B. Carey, Judge J. Edward Conway, Edward Coykendall, E. Frank Flanagan, Joseph M. Fowler, the Rev. C. J. Gadsden, the Rev. Frank Lawrence Gollnick, George Goodfellow, Gustave Kogel, Lloyd LeFever, the Rev. Stanislaus J. Malinowski, Helen Stern Mann, Rabbi Harold Marateck, Nathan G. Markson, Raymond J. Mino, Thomas J. Murray, Louis R. Netter, Clarence S. Rowland, Morris Samter, John H. Saxe, Jacob Schneider, Edgar T. Shultis, Charles Stahl, Sam Stone, Mrs. Christopher Tierney, Mrs. Charles Terwilliger, Senator Arthur H. Wicks.

Held for Assault

Robert Garrison, Glasco negro, was arrested Sunday evening by Sergeant James J. Cunningham and State Trooper Walter Keefe, on a charge of assault, third degree, under a warrant sworn out by Minnie Brooks of Glasco. Arraigned before Justice Bennett at Saugerties, Garrison pleaded not guilty and was held in the Saugerties jail overnight when he was unable to provide the bail, which has been fixed. Monday Garrison was given a hearing before Justice Bennett and after an examination the court found Garrison guilty of the charge and a fine of $50 imposed. The fine was paid.

Tri-Hi Fashion Show

The second annual summer fashion show was given by the Tri-Hi last evening in the Y. W. C. A. gymnasium. Through the cooperation of many local shops the program was arranged by the general committee: Miss Gloria Post, chairman; and the Misses Jean Brigham, Marion Britt, Bette Forst, Dorothy Schick, Betty Groves, Barbara Dawe and Claire Vanderlyn. The setting of the show was the deck of a yacht and the models portrayed clothing for the whole day. George Finn and Frank Oulton lent atmosphere as sailors in the nautical scene. Miss Alma Burger sang a vocal solo.

Miss Florence Jacobson presided during the evening and described the various styles shown. The stage setting was arranged by the Misses Mary Staples and Anita Watrous, lighting by John McConnell, John Cerasaro and John Deegan; properties by Clifford Every. The ticket and program committee was composed of Virginia Johnson, Louise Leonard and Ruth Kruger. Chaperones for the evening were Miss Carolyn Mullin, Mrs. Joseph Craig, Mrs. Alice Post and Mrs. Ward Brigham.

Kael Bergh to Open Memorial Week-End

Several activities will mark the opening week-end of the Kael Bergh Club of Stone Ridge. On Friday, May 30, a picnic will be held at the club starting at 1 p. m. Tennis, swimming and other sports will be enjoyed. Frank Stevens of Stone Ridge has been chosen chairman of this affair and his committee includes Leon Chambers, Percy Clark, William Hasbrouck, Jr., Kenneth Davenport, Dr. J. R. Hasbrouck and Floyd Derringer, all of Stone Ridge; William Morehouse and Albert E. Milliken of Hurley; William T. Fuller, John G. M. Hilton, Dr. Herbert Johnson, Harry LeFever, Jr., and William Merrill of Kingston.

A dance at the club barn, Saturday evening, May 31, is being planned around the theme of a Dude Ranch. Phil Toffel's Orchestra has been secured for the dancing and tables for cards will be arranged on the terrace. The committee arranging this party is Mrs. A. E. Milliken of Hurley, chairman; Mrs. William Hasbrouck, Mrs. Preston Hasbrouck, Mrs. Leon Chambers and Mrs. Percy Clark, all of Stone Ridge, and Mrs. William A. Warren of Hurley.

Surprise Party Held

A surprise birthday party was given recently by Miss Mildred Every of Stone Ridge and William Van Kleek of Kingston in honor of Miss Every's mother, Mrs. Latus Every, also of Stone Ridge. A cake with candles was made and presented by Miss Kate Clearwater. Mrs. Every also received many other lovely gifts.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Ray Snyder, Charles Van Gasbeck, James Cave, Stephen Rich of Kingston, Miss Thelma North of Stone Ridge, Miss Virginia Christy of Accord, John Swinburne and Miss Lee Elles of Modena, Mr. and Mrs. George Kelly of Bearsville, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Every of Jewett, Mrs. Ray Van DeMark and daughter, Helen, and Robert Sutton of High Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ploss and children of Shokan and Latus Every.

M.J.M. Dancing Class Party

A party held at the Y. W. C. A. Saturday evening closed the third term of study for the M. J. M. dancing class under the direction of Miss Ottilia Riccobono. Robert Flynn assisted Miss Riccobono and Thomas Crosby accompanied at the piano.

Those attending were the Misses Jean Demming, Jeanne de la Vergne, Jane Herdman, Ruth Hutton, Rita Lawrence, Theresa McCann, Ann McConnell, Alice and Betty Ruzzo, Peggy Scholter, Doris Sheeley, Helen Leotta and Charles Abernethy, Samuel Cerasaro, Robert Dee, Robert Hillis, Jack James and Robert Matthews, William Haver, Daniel Briggs, Joseph Scholter, Harry Kaprelian and Robert Hicks.

Good Taste Today

By Emily Post

(Author of "Etiquette," "The Personality of a House," "The Blue Book of Social Usage," etc.)

WOMAN SHOULD SIGN NAME SO THAT BUSINESS PEOPLE WILL KNOW WHETHER SHE IS "MISS" OR "MRS."

A man writes me a complaint about the confusion caused by women in business who, he says, "are every day signing their names to business letters either just as 'Mary Smith' or 'M. A. Smith' with no clue to strangers as to whether they are Miss or Mrs. In fact," he adds, "sometimes it is impossible to know definitely whether the writer of the letter signed 'M. A. Smith' is even a woman. If the letterhead offers no clue, then how is one supposed to address a return envelope to such a person?"

The answer to this is a fixed one. When no name is given except "Mary Smith," it is taken for granted that she is Miss Mary Smith. "M. A. Smith" without further explanation would be addressed "Mr." If M. A. Smith wrote under the letterhead of a woman's organization and your question is whether she is Mrs. or Miss, again when in doubt you address her as Miss. Perhaps if a sufficient number of women receive letters incorrectly addressed it will remind them to include sufficient information for a correct return envelope. This is really more inconvenient than serious.

Engraved Invitations But No Bride's Clothes

Dear Mrs. Post: May a bride's family send engraved invitations to her wedding in church and have, though she is not dressing as a bride? I've chosen a long afternoon dress in a becoming color and am wearing a hat, and I wondered, since the preparations are not exactly wedding-like, whether this means we can't send the typical engraved invitations?

Answer: I wrote about this at length some time ago and have since included the material in my book, in case you can find a late edition in your public library. The substance of it was, however, that if there is to be a decoration of the church, and if your clothes and those of the other members of the wedding party are to be helpful in giving a wedding-picture effect, it will be proper to send engraved invitations. But if you are wearing a dark street dress and having one other young woman attendant in another type of street dress, and the bridegroom is wearing a business suit, then engraved invitations will falsely lead to expectations not to be fulfilled.

Newspaper Notice To Express Appreciation

Dear Mrs. Post: We've always owned a store in this town and are now moving to a big city. Everyone here has always been so kind and patronized us loyally, and my husband would like to express some appreciation to each and everyone—which he thinks he can do by printing a notice to that effect in our local paper. I think this might not be in good taste because so general. What is your opinion?

Answer: In a town of small size (which the postmark on your letter indicates), a notice such as you suggest will be both suitable and proper. In other words, it would be much more personal than a similar notice in a metropolitan paper.

(Released By The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)
Mrs. Post is sorry she can no longer answer personal letters. She is glad however to have many printed slips on a variety of subjects to offer to her readers. Today's slip is "Names and Signatures." Be sure to send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Mrs. Post, in care of the Kingston Daily Freeman, P. O. Box 150, Times Square Station, New York, N. Y.

The senior ball of the local high school was held Friday evening and provided a setting that excelled all previous decorative schemes. Flags representing the various nations together with scenes of Latin-American characters and shaded lights produced a picture that was striking. Refreshments were served and the entire program was a success under the direction of Miss N. Leona Hogan.

The Mothers' Guild of St. Mary's parochial school will hold a card party at the school Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The public is invited.

Doll House to Be Shown As Benefit for Britain

A regular meeting of the executive council of Bundles for Britain met Monday at the headquarters, 302 Fair street. H. Edgar Reese, treasurer of the local chapter, reported that the hospital tag lay fund amounted to $80.11 which was sent to the New York headquarters to be used for bombed hospitals in England.

Mrs. James Chase, chairman of the knitting, announced that 221 knitted garments have been sent since the last meeting, making a total of 1,593 articles knit by local women.

Mrs. Edward V. Wilbern, chairman of the benefits, presented the idea of bringing Colleen Moore's Doll House to Kingston for a week in August. The committee decided to accept this opportunity to exhibit the Doll House which is famous throughout the United States. Since it has never been in any city near Kingston the board believes that it will be of great interest to many in Kingston and other nearby communities.

RUNYAN WINS GOODALL GOLF TOURNEY

Paul Runyan (left) of White Plains, N. Y., is congratulated by Vic Ghezzi (right) of Deal, N. J., and Horton Smith, just after Runyan won the $5,000 Goodall round-robin golf tournament in New York—his first major U. S. victory since the P. G. A. championship of 1938. Ghezzi finished in a tie for second, Smith wound up fifth.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

Scout Activities for the Week

Monday evening, May 25, Troop No. 21 of Accord sponsored by the Patroon Grange will receive its new charter and commissions for the leaders and each boy will receive his certificate and tenderfoot pin and Mothers pin which he in turn will give to his mother. This will be done at a regular meeting of the Grange by the officers of the Ulster-Greene Council and the Rondout valley district in which the new troop is organized.

Tuesday evening, May 27, the regular monthly meeting of the executive board of the council will be held at Judy's restaurant on Albany avenue. The camp committee and board will take formal action regarding the proposed new campsite for use of the scouts of the council and plans will be made to be released to the troops on the summer camping program of the council.

Wednesday evening, May 28, the cub-pack committee den mothers and executive of Pack No. 2 are meeting to plan the next pack meeting to be held at Milliken's farm on Hurley road and will be an outdoor meeting. Also plans to recruit two new dens will be discussed.

Thursday, May 29, the southern district committee and court of honor will hold an outdoor meeting at Marlborough Central School. This will be the spring court of honor.

Memorial Day the scouts of the Kingston District will form the fourth division of the parade and all 14 troops are expected to take part. Before this scouts will also help the Veterans' Association of Kingston by decorating the graves of the veterans at Montrose and Wiltwyck Cemeteries.

The fifth annual camporee of the Ulster-Greene Council will be held at Forsyth Park, June 6, 7, and 8, with all troops in the council invited to take part. So far 40 of the 53 troops have said they would be present and plans for the following events are completed. The Kingston District Court of Honor will be held Friday evening, June 6, from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m. and all scout troops in the camporee are invited to take part in the ceremonies.

The district campfires will be held at the close of the Court of Honor and the best troop stunts will be selected for the Saturday night campfire. Saturday morning the troops will compete in the council first aid contest, each troop having a team of five boys in the event.

Saturday afternoon the scouts and the guests, the Girl Scouts, will parade from the park to the stadium and then the boys will compete in the following events: Sack race, signaling contest, centipede race, knot tying relay, string burning contest, wall scaling event, chariot race, and obstacle race. Saturday evening the honor campfire will be the main event and ribbons for the first aid contest and field events will be presented to the troops and the selected stunts will be put on for the benefit of the parents and friends. Sunday morning the Catholic scouts will attend Mass at St. Joseph's Church and a Protestant field service will be held at the park for the other boys.

The Mothers' Guild of St. Mary's parochial school will hold a card party at the school Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The public is invited.

Disney Cartoons Not So Animated As Strike Looms

Hollywood, May 27 (AP)—Walt Disney's cartoons won't be quite so animated tomorrow, says the Screen Cartoon Guild.

The A.F.L. union voted last night to strike at Disney's studio to support its demand for recognition. It claims to represent 85 per cent of his employees.

Walter P. Spreckels, labor conciliator for Disney, said the studio wants the National Labor Relations Board to hold an election to determine whether the Guild or the Independent American Society of Screen Cartoonists should be recognized. The A.S.C. also claims to represent a majority of Disney's cartoonists.

The Guild also demands reinstatement of five of its leaders whom it charges were discharged because of union activity.

CITY SOFTBALL LEAGUE

Garment Workers Win

The I.L.G.W.U. softball team scored an easy win over the Buicks last night in a City League contest at Hasbrouck Park by the score of 22 to 2. Bob Balfe hurled for the winners and gave up only one hit. He has yet to be defeated.

Matthews won the big run for the winners, hitting two homers and a triple. Kushner also slammed out a round-tripper. The Buicks were represented in the four-base column by Townsend.

Score by innings:
Buicks 000 200 0—2 1 4
I.L.G.W.U. . . . 210 379 x—22 20 0

Batteries: Townsend and Lewis, Balfe and Matthews.

7th Ward Nips 'Y'

Scoring three runs in the fourth the 7th Ward softball club managed to pull through with a 4 to 3 victory last night over the Y. M. C. A. tossers at Loughran Park in a City League game.

Kherdian poled a homer for the losers in the second with one on to put the "Y" team in the lead by 2-1.

In the fourth Coughlin opened with a walk. After Kozowski skied to the outfield, the ball being dropped by the fielder, Maurer singled. Thomas then singled to deliver the winning run.

Score by innings:
7th Ward 100 300 0—4
Y. M. C. A. 021 000 0—3

Tonight's Schedule

Wimpies - Electrols at Loughran.

Fullers - Woodstock at Hasbrouck.

Johnny VanderMeer's record through Friday night was two victories and three defeats, yet he did not allow more than four runs in any one game and hurled four complete contests. His work has been very encouraging to Bill McKechie.

Mary Williams or Betty Arnold is expected to go for the opponents. Vince Van Bramer, president of the social club, offered a comment when asked by a reporter but wouldn't state his claims on the game.

Following the tussle, which is expected to draw a large turnout, refreshments will be served at the club rooms. Transportation will be furnished for those without cars from the club rooms at 6:30 o'clock this evening.

DODGER COMPLETES A DOUBLE PLAY

Billy Herman (left), Brooklyn second baseman, leaps off the ground as he hurls the ball to First Baseman Camilli to complete a double play in the first inning of the Dodgers-Phillies game in New York. Herman took Pee Wee Reese's toss after the Dodger shortstop fielded Joe Marty's grounder, touched second to retire Merrill May (19) and threw to first for the second out. Brooklyn won the game, 6-4.

Baseball Tournaments Are Set for July

Details Are Featured in Baseball Guide

Conn Registers T.K.O. Over Knox In Eighth Round

Conn Believes He's Set for Louis Next Month; Victor Floors Foe Three Times

Pittsburgh, May 27 (AP)—Billy Conn, waltzing light heavyweight champ stalking Joe Louis, points proudly to his eighth-round technical knockout triumph over Puddy Buddy Knox, Dayton, Ohio, heavyweight, as a sample of what he "will give Joe next month."

"I've had the workout I needed now and I'm ready for the Bomber," asserted Billy a few minutes after his thumping lefts and rights floored Knox three times and beat him into helplessness last night before Pittsburgh's largest fight crowd of 27,043 spectators.

Billy, weighing 180½ was 10 pounds lighter than his 24-year-old opponent. He started slowly, then, almost without warning, Conn's flicking left became a bolt that started the Ohioan's head bobbing. Knox slipped to his knees after a smash below the heart in the sixth but got up without a count.

But in the next round a series of four lefts to the head backed Buddy into the corner and a right dropped him for a nine count. He came up into a fresh storm of leather and again flopped for a toll of eight. The third time he left the canvas after a nine count found the bell ending the round. He couldn't get off his seat for the eighth.

"That boy can hit harder than anybody gives him credit," commented Knox later. "He doesn't have much of a right, though."

Conn's hometown stand brought him the biggest purse of his career—a 33 1/3 per cent slice of $68,000 house.

Speaking of the Indians, Cleveland has not lost a game this year that two or three additional hits would not have turned into triumphs. They have lost five games by one run, two by two-run margins and two by three runs. All of which shows that pitching and defense rather than hitting is keeping the Indians on top.

Cleveland, outpointed Gene Ward, 137½—Chicago, (8).

Cards Pack Dynamite at Plate, Edge Out Cubs by 12 to 11

Redbirds Triumph In 11th With Two Homers for 7th Win

Lady Luck Continues With Dodgers as Team Beats Phils, 6-4; Reds and Tigers Win Games

(By The Associated Press)

The only club in the National League that packs dynamite at the plate is that swashbuckling crew crossed by Billy Southworth in St. Louis.

Others set off big firecrackers sometimes, but the league leaders really have the boom-boom. The Cardinals are young and fast, make lots of mistakes and occasionally beat themselves. However, they have had more "big innings" this spring than any other team in the senior circuit and they are dangerous right up to the final out.

They proved it again yesterday by chopping down the Chicago Cubs, 12-11, with two home runs in the 11th inning.

The Cards took a 9-0 lead in the first three innings, scoring seven times in the third, but came apart in the next stanza to let the Cubs get six runs and eventually take the lead, 10-9, in the seventh. In the last of the ninth Don Padgett doubled home the tying run. In the 11th Bill Nicholson homered to put the Cubs ahead again but Jim Brown hit a home run to tie the score and Padgett followed immediately with another round-tripper.

This was the Cards' seventh straight victory.

Marty Drops Fly

The Brooklyn Dodgers were presented with a 6-4 triumph by the humble Phillies when Centerfielder Joe Marty dropped a fly with the bases loaded in the fifth and Shortstop Bob Bragan made a wild relay on the same play. The combination of errors allowed three scores.

The veteran Fred Fitzsimmons made his first start of the year for the Dodgers and received credit for the victory with the help of faultless relief hurling by Kirby Higbe in the last 3 1/3 innings. The world champion Cincinnati Reds outslugged the Pittsburgh Pirates for a 7-3 decision in a night game. The Reds punched out 13 hits, including home runs by Harry Craft and Ernie Coy. Buckey Walters was raked for 10 safeties, but squirmed through for his fifth victory against four defeats.

In the only American League encounter the Detroit Tigers stopped the Cleveland Indians, 5-3, with three runs in the ninth, two on Bruce Campbell's double with the bases loaded. The blowoff in the ninth brought Buck Newsom his much-needed third victory instead of his seventh defeat after he had been removed for a pinchhitter.

Sports Roundup

New York, May 27 (AP)—The Baer-Louis fight pictures furnished plenty of fuel for the controversy which still rages.

Texas U. expects to collect plenty of fat dividends from Coach Dana X. Bible's $15,000-per-year salary in the next two years. . . . Joseph Paul DiMaggio III is scheduled to report in October and it's a safe bet that Ed Barrow will be right there at the ringside—pardon—criside, with a blank Yankee contract. . . . Clark Shaughnessy got a ticket for passing through San Mateo, Calif., at 65 m.p.h.—in a Model T, we suppose. . . . Jack Doyle, the "Wizard of Oz," will make a book on the National Open and plans to have his prices ready by the end of the week.

Leonard Lyons, who covers the charged water front for the N. Y. Post, reveals Don Budge had to have both his chin and bugle altered for his fall movie commitment. . . . Wonder if Jim Robinson, who is booked to fight Lou Nova next month in Minneapolis, is the same Jim Robinson who looked so terrible against Valentin Campolo and Lee Savold the last times we saw him? . . . Ted Husing is out of the running for the blow-by-blow broadcasting job when CBS takes over the Mike Jacobs fights next month. . . . The old reliable Sam Taub and Jimmy Powers, sports editor of the N. Thornton Lee, White Sox southpaw, has had no breathing spells in any of the five games he had worked prior to May 15. Lost to Cleveland, 2 to 0 and then beat Cleveland, 2 to 1, Washington 3 to 2 and Detroit 4 to 3, also holding the Yankees to a tie in ten innings, the Yankees winning after Lee had retired for a pinch hitter.

With Benny Mc Coy called to an army camp May 27, "Crash" Davis probably will be installed as Connie Mack's second sacker. Mr. Mack is of the opinion that Davis is going to be a star infielder. But, when he gave way to Mc Coy two weeks ago, he was batting only .172 while Mc Coy has been hitting .327.

BETTER TENNIS

By DICK SKEEN

Professional Tennis Star

On the forehand, as shown in the picture, weight goes to the left foot as the ball is stroked, with the left arm—assisted by the toe of the right foot—used as balance. The grip used is the eastern, which puts the hand and body weight behind the racket's hitting surface. Because of the low trajectory of the ball on this shot, the racket face is partially open.

On higher bounding and deeper shots the racket is more nearly closed. Note that the ball, when contacted, will be well beyond the body toward the net, allowing your full weight to get into the shot.

Despite this picture, it's still a good policy to keep your eye on the ball ALL THE TIME. My many years of teaching have made it almost a habit—and a bad one—to watch my pupil on the other side of the net to see what he's doing. But you keep your eye on the ball!

Recreations Will Practice Tonight At Local Stadium

Rees Will Engage G. E.'s at Schenectady Next Sunday; Francello Is Big Help to Team

After their opening day victory over Copake Falls Sunday afternoon the Kingston Recreations will resume practice sessions tonight at municipal stadium starting at 6 o'clock. Manager Joe Hoffmann requests all players to attend. Sunday's 5 to 2 triumph over the Fallsmen meant a lot to the Rees who have a number of new faces in the lineup this season. After the contest all was in favor concerning the new players who helped the club come through with the win.

For the main part Bob Bush resumed his pitching form of 1940 and also helped out with his batting power. Bob still remains as the top-notch flinger and a dangerous swinger at the plate. The infield revealed the expected help of Charlie Francello at short and the usual fine play of Andy Celuch. Although the fly-chasers including Mac Tiano, Vince Smedes, Bill Thomas, Jimmy Ashdown and Charlie Lay didn't show up so well, the Rees' manager is worrying too much. All of these players are of high calibre and before very long their play will be of mid-season form.

It was brought to the attention of this department Monday that the Rees might not have the services of Tommy Mains this summer. Tommy now at Syracuse, is reported to be ready to join Saugerties when he returns home. However, this hasn't been confirmed by either Saugerties or the Recreations.

Next Sunday the Rees will travel to meet their old standbys, the General Electrics of Schenectady, at Central Park in the Dorpian City. The Rees might also play the Mohawk Giants at Troy in the afternoon and the G. E.'s at 6 o'clock. If these two games materialize Al Proia and Jimmy "Lefty" Martin will probably be given the call to take the mound.

Endicott Defeats Saugerties, 4-3

Schultzmen to Play Copake Falls Memorial Day

The Lindy Miles Club of Endicott spoiled opening day for the Saugerties club Sunday when they defeated the villagers in a 10-inning game by the score of 4 to 3. Endicott, presenting one of the best teams ever to appear at Cantine's Field, played fine ball behind lanky Bill Bowman who bested Eddie Wallace, the Saugerties flinger.

A welcome addition to the Saugerties club was the appearance of Bill Finger, veteran infielder, who was at short Sunday afternoon.

The Saugerties club has a roster including Joe Brown, Toddy Uhl, Paul Joyce, Bob Frelich, Riverberg, Bill Finger, Simonites, Kanuiter, Schmidt, Brink and Keenan, Wallace and Gabby Benjamin.

Friday, Decoration Day, the Schultzmen will open the Mid-Hudson League when they meet Copake Falls at Saugerties.

Team Seeks Games

The Greenkill Tavern softball team, managed by Johnny "Boe" Boeinger, is seeking games with all clubs. Teams interested are requested to call the Greenkill Tavern 4463 after 7 o'clock this evening.

At Bill Fitzpatrick's Barn this evening the Catholic Athletic Association will hold a banquet honoring the various members of the association for their performances throughout the past season. One organization which will receive mention will be the St. Mary's basketball team which won the league championship in fine style. Members of this pennant-winning machine are in the bottom row from left to right, Don Murphy, Bill Tierney, Dick McConnell and Babe Colughlin. In the top row left to right, are George Dougherty, Jake Williams, Tommy Madden and Hank Krum. Johnny Law, famous Notre Dame football star and a number of other notables will be on hand to speak to the members and their friends.

Don Budge Begins Defense of World's Tennis Title Today

Recent Bridegroom Meets John Faunce at Chicago Tennis Club; Tilden Into Third Round

Chicago, May 27 (AP)—J. Donald Budge, a bridegroom of 24 hours, begins the defense of his world's professional tennis championship today against John Faunce of Hollywood at the Chicago Town and Tennis Club.

Budge, who has won all the major net titles as amateur and pro, married Miss Dierdre Connelman of Glendale, Calif., a Stanford University co-ed, yesterday, after he had drawn a bye in the first round of the tourney.

The California redhead's tourney debut shares the spotlight with the singles match between Vincent Richards, New York, and Karel Kozeluh, Greenwich, Conn., both former pro champions. Dick Skeen, Hollywood, plays Dan Watson, Chevy Chase, Md.; Les Stoecken, Los Angeles, meets Joe Whalen, Coral Gables, Fla.; and Fred Perry, Beverly Hills, Calif., engaged Charles Wood of New York.

The old master, 48-year-old Bill Tilden, moved into the third round yesterday with a 6-1, 6-3, 6-0 conquest of George O'Connell of Chicago. Keith Gledhill of Los Angeles was impressive in whipping the veteran Berkeley Bell of New York, 6-4, 4-6, 6-0, 6-4, and Joe Nogrady of Dallas eliminated Allan Wylie of Wilmette, Ill., 6-1, 6-2, 6-1.

Last night at Armory No. 2 diamond the First Dutch softball team defeated Hurley by 16 to 4 with Ed Sylvester on the mound. Sylvester kept things under control for his team while his teammates fanned five Hurley batters.

In the other game last night Fair Street defeated St. James by 8 to 7.

Spencer Leads Field

New York, May 27 (AP)—Cliff Spencer, long-driving Washington pro who never has invaded the field of big-time golf, had his day of glory yesterday when he led all the qualifiers for the National Open Championship at Fort Worth, Tex., June 5 and 6. Playing over the Columbia Country Club course, where they held the open back in 1921, the 35-year-old Spencer fired rounds of 68 and 69 for a 36-hole total of 137. That not only put him four strokes ahead of 28 other golfers in his own district, but topped the more than 1,000 who yesterday sought the 128 places available in the national tourney.

Maroon Golfers Beat Ellenville

Locals Register Third Win by 11 to 1 Count

Last week the Kingston High School golf squad traveled to Ellenville and won its third DUSO match of the year by the score of 11 to 1. Lee Boice shot a 41 and 38 for a total of 79 to pace the Maroons.

Van Aken stacked up two 40's for 80. Dick Bunny lost by one point but a 41 and 45 for 86. Vic Allen, the new fourth man for the Maroons shot a 90.

So far this season Bunny has shown remarkable form in his performances and has kept Kingston on the winning end many times. Today Kingston was to have met Monticello at the local course.

According to a spokesman of the golf squad Watts Bailey, coach of the team said recently "the club is doing acceptably well. If we can keep up the play of late we'll be in there fighting for the DUSO League crown."

Apparently when the Cleveland Indians have their pre-game talk fest, Bob Feller says: "Fellows, get me two runs today and we will win." At any rate, four of Feller's six victories have been by a score of 2 to 1, two from Detroit and one apiece from New York and Washington.

Three of Sam Chapman's four home runs have been made off southpaws, one off Grove and two off Chase.

French Cars Allowed Indianapolis, May 27 (AP)—Two eight-cylinder Talbot special racing automobiles from France will be allowed on the Indianapolis speedway over protest of American drivers. Chief Steward Ted Doescher said last night that their drivers, Rene Lebergue and Jean Trevoux, would be permitted to try to qualify them and to drive them in the 500-mile race Friday if they succeeded. A drivers' committee complained yesterday that the Talbots had not been weighed nor put through tests for structural defects.

Fierce Blaze Sweeps Jersey Railroad Piers; Man Dies

Blaze Imperils Huge Stores of Lumber and Steel; Fire Starts in Some Creosote Piling

Jersey City, N. J., May 27 (AP)—Two Pennsylvania railroad piers, 25 box cars and three Hudson river car floats, all laden with merchandise for shipment to New York city, blazed fiercely in New York harbor today.

An unidentified barge worker lost his life, police reported. A fire captain overcame by heat was hospitalized.

After an hour's battle, officials expressed belief that the blaze had been brought under control.

The fire that swept over the open wharves sent flames and heavy smoke into the sky.

Great stores of lumber and steel were threatened.

The fire evidently started, police said, in creosote piling aboard a freight train ready for loading on barges for transportation to New York.

The piers and open wharves adjoining are just south of Black Tom, scene of an historic World War explosion and fire.

They are in the Greenville terminal, a major freight yard for New York in the Pennsylvania system. Nearly two miles south-southwest of the Statue of Liberty, they are just north of the Bayonne city line.

ALLIGERVILLE

Alligerville, May 27—Kenneth Davenport, superintendent of the Kysierke cemetery, has been having the grounds improved for Decoration Day. John Smith and Virgil Bogart did the work.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson of Utica were guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. DeWitt Sunday.

Those interested in the Sunday school of the Community Church are making plans to observe Children's Day. The date will be announced later.

Dr. DeWitt and family of New Paltz called at his father's Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Abram Kelder and daughter, Marguerite of Rosendale, visited Mrs. Ida DeGroat Friday night.

Mrs. Anna King and daughter, Mrs. Julia Boice, daughter and son of Syracuse, and Mrs. George Decker of Kerhonkson called on their aunt, Mrs. Ida DeGroat, Sunday night.

Congratulations are being extended to Mr. and Mrs. Francis Osterhout, who were married in the Holy Cross Church, Kingston, Sunday evening. The bride was the former Miss Violet Fischang of Kingston.

Memorial Day

Our United States will again celebrate Memorial Day, May 30, at peace with all other nations, and may it continue to do so. Do we fully appreciate this blessing?

While this hatred, jealousy and envy is seething in foreign countries, we recall the sacrifices of those men who gave birth to this nation and to those lives which were sacrificed to make our nation united, also that those who lived might live in freedom and hope to transmit it to posterity.

Let us see that our beloved flag is flown from every public building and in every individual home. Let us be sure it is raised correctly. There is no flag more honored than that of the U. S. of America, which prompts me to write the following lines:

Our Flag

Oh, how we love our country! Oh, how we love our flag! For it we have great honor And are wont to boast and brag.

It's something that it stands for That makes our heart beat fast, It's the glorious recollection Of the spirit of the past.

A spirit great and glorious From which we never lag, It makes our heart beat wild with joy

To gaze upon our flag, So let us always loyal be Our honor never sag.

As we stand with thoughts uplifted At the passing of Our Flag, (Mrs. Kathryn Boice, Mrs. Chairman, Correct use of Flag, Wiltwyck Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.)

To Take Stand

Mrs. Ruth Steadman (foreground), 26, attractive Harvard Business School secretary on trial for the slaying of Robert Emery, arrives in Kingston today, where her attorney said she would be called to the stand in her own defense.

wages from $6 to $7 a day, with the southern operators boosting their scale from $5.60 to $6.60 but declining to eliminate the 40-cent sectional differential.

In other Washington developments, Senator Byrd (D.-Va.) introduced a resolution in Congress declaring that "strikes in defense industries are contrary to public policy and they are hereby condemned," and Secretary Perkins announced appointment of a committee to decide which labor disputes shall be turned over the national mediation board.

To the committee she named Dr. Clarence Dykstra, chairman of the board; Dr. John R. Steelman, chief of the labor department's conciliation service, and Maxwell Brandwein, a member of the staff of Sidney Hillman, associate O.P.M. director.

Some 12,000 C.I.O. lumber workers in the Pacific northwest logging country yesterday declined the mediation boards proposal for resumption of work pending settlement of labor disputes which brought on strikes two weeks ago.

The strikers demanded a full union shop, wage increases of 7½ cents an hour to a minimum of 75 cents, elimination of piece work, and paid vacations.

Little Action in Stocks on Monday

What Action There Was on Market Was on Down Side

There was little of anything to induce optimism in the news Monday and what action there was in the market was on the down side, transactions totaling 300,080 shares.

The Dow-Jones industrial average closed at 115.73, less than half a point above the low for this year and a loss of .91 point for the day.

The rail average dropped .20, to close at 27.54 and the utilities were off .14, to 18.85. The list of 15 most active stocks showed but two, American Radiator and Nash-Kelvinator, with gains, both being up an eighth.

Int. Pap. & Power led the list, to close unchanged in turnover of 10,700 shares. There were three other issues closing unchanged for the day, while the remainder had losses, U. S. Rubber being the only one to drop over a point.

There was interest in the disposal of some $62,000,000 worth of common and preferred stock of the recapitalized American Viscose Co. The transaction went through smoothly in after hour deals, the transfer marking a change from British to American ownership of the company and the preferred going to a small premium above the offering level.

Commodity prices were irregular with limited changes. Cotton and wheat rose following signing of the 85 per cent parity farm loan bill, but the news had been discounted and prices settled back.

Wheat closed lower for the day and cotton had an advance of one to five points. Corn went to new seasonal highs, gaining as much as 1½ cents a bushel. Sugar remained steady. At Chicago hog prices gained 10 to 20 cents, best hogs topping $9.65 per cwt., best since August, 1938.

Department store sales in the New York area gained sharply in the week ended May 25, with an increase of 17½ per cent over a year ago.

to get an accurate breakdown of public opinion.

The mail and messages range from one extreme to the other.

The Chief Executive cancelled all engagements, including his press conference, today to permit him to finish work on his speech.

The President planned to devote most of his day to the address, and the White House indicated that it would take into consideration virtually any major change in international affairs occurring before 9:30 p. m. (E. S. T.) when Mr. Roosevelt speaks by radio.

An all-network transmission will carry the President's words to the four corners of the nation, and a world-wide short wave relay will broadcast the address to other lands. In addition to the direct English relay, there will be translations in French, German, Italian, Spanish and Portuguese.

The White House yielded no hints as to the exact subject of the President's speech, but did not discourage the growing impression that the address would rank with the most significant of Mr. Roosevelt's state papers.

Highly-placed officials were of the opinion that one portion of the address would contain a demand for more active aid to Britain, regardless of Axis threats. Other quarters looked for a vigorous pronouncement of foreign policy, possibly coupled with a formal reassertion of the historic American doctrine of freedom of the seas.

It was noted that Adolf Hitler's own newspaper, Volkischer Beobachter, devoted a leading article yesterday to discussing the American idea of freedom of the seas. The article asserted that at the end of the war the German fleet would be the "guarantor of what until now has only been a misused slogan."

Whatever the contents of the "fireside chat," the President has received no end of volunteered advice and suggestions. They ranged from appeals for convoys to recommendations that he seek to effect a negotiated peace. In the field of domestic affairs, demands have centered on the need for a policy that would end defense production stoppages due to strikes.

Last Minute Letter

One group of opposition legislators collaborated today on a last-minute letter urging the chief executive to say nothing which would have the effect of putting the country into war "without the approval of the people through their congressional representatives."

Thirty members of Congress hostile to administration foreign policy discussed the letter at a late meeting yesterday and agreed that it should be put in final form and dispatched to the White House in advance of Mr. Roosevelt's speech. A subcommittee headed by Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) was given that task.

A preliminary draft said that the group was considering conducting a "national referendum on the issue of peace or war."

In another late meeting yesterday the executive council of the American federation of labor made a formal advance declaration of support for the pronouncement the President may make on matters of foreign policy. The council also urged action to "redouble in quantity and speed" American aid to Britain.

The President will deliver his "fireside chat" from the east wing of the White House before an audience that will include the entire Latin American diplomatic corps and their families, members of the cabinet, and personal guests of Mrs. Roosevelt.

The representatives of the western hemisphere republics were invited to be present after Mr. Roosevelt was compelled to cancel his scheduled address at the reception they had planned for him on May 14.

Before that address was cancelled, Stephen Early, the President's press secretary, cautioned newsmen not to attach special importance to it, but he declined to repeat that admonition about tonight's broadcast. On the contrary, Early disclosed yesterday that "rapidly changing conditions abroad" over the week-end had caused Mr. Roosevelt to revise his speech completely.

In preparing the address, Mr. Roosevelt has had the assistance of Playwright Robert E. Sherwood and Judge J. Rosenman of the New York Supreme Court. Their participation in the preparation of a presidential speech usually fore-shadows pronouncements of exceptional importance.

Vitamins in Dog Food
Further than just giving a dog food to see that his appetite is appeased, we must make sure that this food contains the vitamins necessary to the well-being of the dog. Calcium and phosphorus in a ratio of two to one should be maintained in a dog's diet at all times. Calcium controls so many conditions of the body, normal and abnormal, and it is such a cheap item to obtain and the dog's need of it is so great that it should be fed in some form every day.

If you see your dog eating grass you know that nature is taking care of something lacking in the dog's system. Grass acts as an emetic and laxative to dogs and also supplies roughage to a diet that is concentrated and lacking in bulk and succulence and also supplies vitamin A, iron and other necessities.

Right Amount of Soap
For the best laundering results the soap and water should be in the right proportions. Washer manufacturers have made it simple to tell when the solution has reached the best stage.

Start with a cup of soap for each load, they advise, then churn up the suds before adding the clothes. Keep adding more soap until two or three inches of thick suds have formed. In washers which churn the suds below the surface the thick soapy feel of the solution will indicate when the suds are sufficiently abundant.

If clothes are not too soiled, two or even three loads can be washed in the original solution. Sometimes it is necessary to add a little more soap to the second and third loads.

Weather Men Needed in War

Long-Range Forecasting Is Vital Necessity as Shown in Europe.

STATE COLLEGE, PA. — Long-range weather forecasting, a proven ally of Adolf Hitler, is a vital necessity of nations at war, according to Dr. Helmut Landsberg, meteorologist at Pennsylvania State college.

Dr. Landsberg said the German system of weather forecasting, perfected by Dr. Franz Baur, will receive its greatest test when the Nazis prepare an invasion of England.

He said recent reports of Royal Air force planes bombing the resort town of Spa-Hamburg, where the Baur observatory is located, is proof that Great Britain has realized the importance of this field of science to warfare. The Spa-Hamburg observatory is the only military objective in the town, he said.

Strategic Importance.
"If this is true," Dr. Landsberg said, "it is another sign of the strategic importance of meteorology in present-day warfare and further endorsement of the effort being made in the United States to build up its forecasting techniques."

The program to improve weather forecasting in the United States has the endorsement of Dr. Landsberg, but he cautioned, its full importance will not be realized immediately. He said students given graduate scholarships in meteorology by the United States army air corps, for example, will not reach their peak efficiency until they have had long training and continuous experience in research work.

The Germans, said Dr. Landsberg, had a 10-year jump on other nations in establishing a long-range forecasting system in 1930. Now Germany is issuing 10-day weather forecasts. The United States weather bureau only recently began issuing five-day forecasts.

Depend on Weather.
Dr. Landsberg was a student in Dr. Baur's observatory. He said the success of the German scientist was based upon long years of study and accumulation of records and adaptation of formulas gathered over the last several years.

"In 1940 warfare, instead of losing importance as have other natural obstacles, such as topographic barriers, weather has gained as a strategic element," he said. "Aerial and mechanized blitzkrieg depends on good weather."

"There should be no delay to foster research along this line for defense purposes. It is fortunate and consoling that any advance made in this respect will last beyond the times of struggle and will be useful scientific information for such peaceful pursuits as air traffic or farming."

Oregon Reforestation
An increasing interest in reforestation on private land in western Oregon is reported by Dr. George W. Peavy, president emeritus of Oregon State college and a member of the state board of forestry.

At these meetings hearings were held on the classification of approximately 40,000 acres of logged-off lands as reforestation lands. Under the state law, owners of cut-over forest lands may have their holdings classified as reforestation lands, explained Dr. Peavy.

During the period of such classifications, taxes of only 5 cents an acre are collected. When the new crop of timber is removed, owners pay to the counties 12½ per cent of the value of the logs removed as a yield tax.

Another Theory Doubted By Science After Years

Does the ether of space, that odd medium in which the earth and everything on it were once supposed to swim, actually exist? A generation ago school books described this mysterious medium in such definite terms that many who are now middle-aged, but who have not kept close track of science since leaving school still believe in the ether as faithfully as they believe in the existence of their noses. Today, however, science suspects that the earlier school books were a bit too certain about the ether, says the Scientific American, for there never has been any really watertight, final, experimental evidence for its existence. There is only logical evidence and logic without actual test often goes astray.

Because they reasoned that there must be some medium through which light could be transmitted, the scientists of a generation or more ago "created," as it were, a medium for this purpose out of nothingness. That is, they "postulated" it. Then they used the word over and over till it sounded substantial and taught it to the youth—those middle-aged men of today. Thus it came to have almost the same standing as if they had actually seen some ether, weighed it, felt it, tasted it, smelled it, or heard it.

Adequate Wiring Improves Lights

There is a little more to the phrase "adequate wiring" than is usually visualized. Everyone is familiar with the necessity of sufficient electrical outlets and the convenience of enough switches to light the way around the house, but not all home owners are acquainted with "wire capacity" or "light that is right" or the need to prepare for the future.

When a heavy duty appliance is used, such as ironer or washing machine, a voltage drop is caused and the lights in the house will be slightly dimmed. That is the result of insufficient wire capacity. A reliable electrician can inform the home owner as to the proper gauge wire necessary.

Ceiling or bracket lights controlled by wall switches should be installed in all rooms, halls, and porches. If a wall switch controls a lighting outlet serving movable lights then ceiling or bracket lights may be omitted in the living room.

In all homes more electric appliances are being used now than ever before. Undoubtedly, the next few years will see the development of many more electrical appliances that will be used in homes. House wiring and outlets should be adequate to take care of them.

Homemade Molasses Taffy

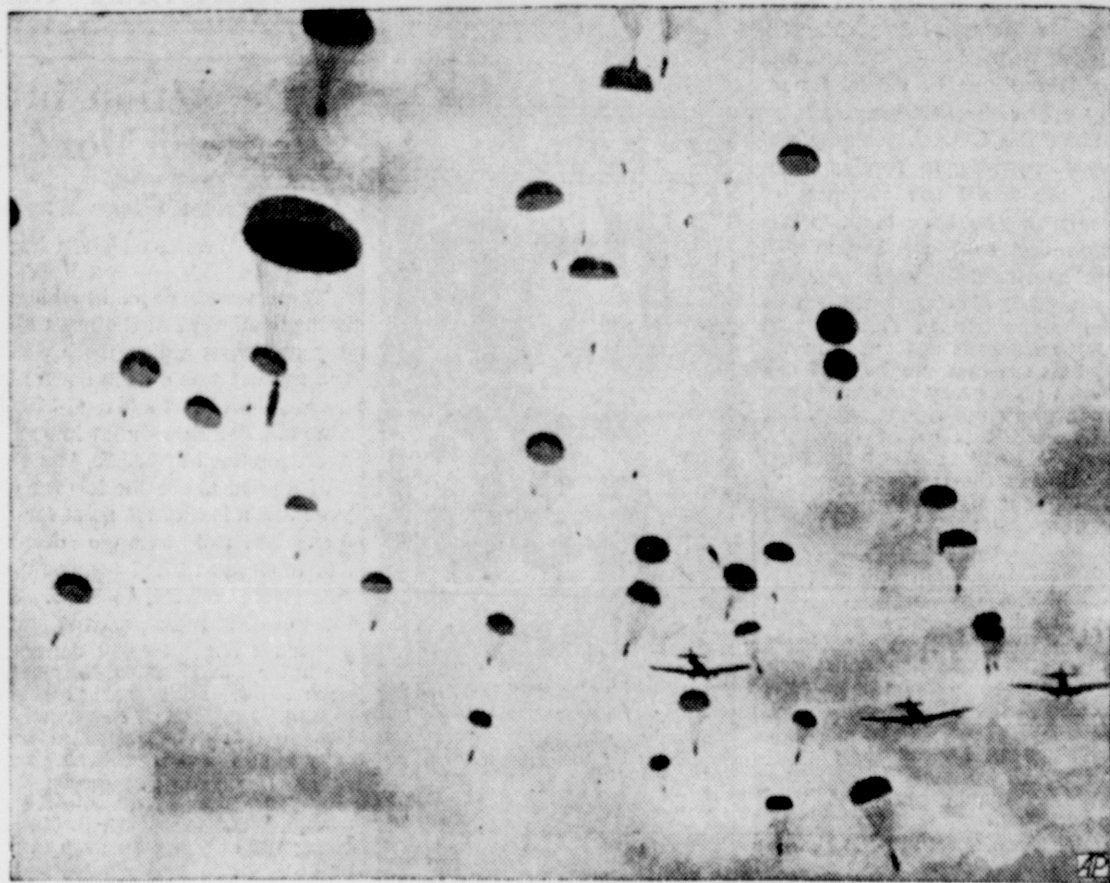

A heat wave is undoubtedly no time to stage a taffy-pulling party, but come a long day of steady summer rain a distracted mother with vacationing children on her hands will appreciate this recipe for molasses taffy.

While keeping the eight flavors of the lightweight taffy a secret, the candymakers imparted the following information for the homemade molasses variety: Melt 3 tablespoons butter in a heavy kettle, add 2 cups molasses and two-thirds cup sugar, stir over low heat until sugar dissolves. Boil at 250 degrees F., stirring constantly until the mixture turns brittle when dropped in cold water. Then add 2 tablespoons vinegar. Pour out on platter, shallow pan or marble slab (any of them must be buttered), and when cool enough to handle pull until light colored and porous. Then cut in small pieces with scissors or sharp knife. Dust cornstarch or flour on fingers to keep them from burning while pulling and use only tips of fingers and thumbs.

Incendiary bombs usually weigh less than 100 pounds.

Demolition bombs range in weight from 50 to 4,000 pounds.
